Letters to the Editor

Monterey County Board of Supervisors
Monterey County Courthouse
Salinas, California

Gentlemen:
The Rancho Rio Vista Property Owners Association has always supported the Carmel Valley Master Plan and has consistently opposed alterations of that plan, particularly at the mouth of Carmel Valley. At a recent meeting of the membership, the majority of the members expressed concern about the change in zoning which was recently granted to Arbor Development Company for their proposed development of the area.

This matter has been further considered by our board of directors who again expressed concern about the future development of the mouth of the valley, particularly in view of your action in granting the rezoning in the face of the unanimous opposition of the various property owners' groups and a majority of the people living in the area.

Our association requests that you reconsider the approval of the rezoning requested by Arbor Development Company and that no further rezoning be granted in the area between the Rancho Canada Golf Course and Highway No. 1 until a complete review of the existing zoning has been made.

Very truly yours,
EGON C. DURR, President

SUBJECT: RE-ZONING OF VAL VERDE DRIVE PROPERTY
Gentlemen:

It is discouraging enough to feel that one has no control over what his representatives and others in Washington and Sacramento do, but to feel the same about our local representatives is enough to make one think for sure that we are living under some sort of dictatorship.

I am referring, of course, to the recent approval by the three members of the Board of Supervisors of the rezoning of the property at the Southeast corner of Val Verde Drive. I am against rezoning in general because the laws are made for everybody (though some people don't seem to know this), and if one person can have his property rezoned, then everyone else is entitled to the same privilege. Needless to say, this can lead to a complete breakdown of the law. Also, we are supposed to have an approved Master Plan for this whole area, and one wonders what good it is if it can be circumvented for even one person.

Apparently there has now been approval given for the construction of 287 housing units on three parcels of land in this vicinity. Not only are these adding to the general destruction of the beauty of this area, but they cannot help but add to the school, traffic and sewage problems which so far we have been unable to handle. Surely we should be able to expect something better than this from our representatives in Salinas.

The people who bought these pieces of property must have known at the time what the zoning was. Why should they expect special privileges? There are many lots available in this area which are not built on; and no doubt many houses available, too. I do not feel we are obliged to change the type of community in order to accommodate anyone who happens to want to live here.

Perhaps nothing can be done about what has already been accomplished by these three Supervisors; but I wished to express my feelings on the subject and to commend Messrs. Church and Tavernetti for voting against this rezoning. Thank you very much for looking after our interests.

However, since the vote on this matter was 3-2, I strongly urge the Board of Supervisors to reconsider this far-reaching decision.

Very truly yours,
HELEN LAMBERT

CARMEL PINE CONE

Dear Sir:

I am the owner of approximately seven of the eight acres that were rezoned on January 12, 1971, by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors which received front page attention in last week's Pine Cone.

I was disappointed in the one-sided report and the misleading photographs. I think the following points should be made available to the readers of the Pine Cone.

This matter had received serious study by the Supervisors and the Monterey County Planning Commission. This rezoning request had been before the Planning Commissioners on five separate occasions, including two public hearings and was before the Board of Supervisors for two public hearings. In addition, the matter had received careful study by a special committee of the Planning Commission. The rezoning was recommended to the Board of Supervisors by a unanimous vote of the Planning Commission.

This rezoning was in accordance with the published Carmel Valley Master Plan, providing for a low-density, multiple uses surrounding the commercial property at the mouth of the Valley. This master plan defines this use as "garden type motels, resort hotels, or professional offices." Such uses are recommended by the master plan as a buffer area around commercial centers in the Valley.

I believe the proposed use of my property by the Arbor Development Company to be most reasonable and well within the anticipated uses of the master plan. The owners of a substantial majority of the acreage of the property located along Val Verde Drive supported the rezoning request. Most of these owners, like myself, have owned this property for many years and while we have regretted the change from the rural and agriculture use of this part of the Valley, we now find ourselves unable to productively use our property unless we put it to the use suggested by the master plan.

This rezoning was not really a precedent. Within the last two years, Carmel Lago and the Riverwood Tract, approximately three hundred yards from my property were rezoned to accommodate approximately ten residential units to the acre. In comparison to these parcels, the request regarding my property seems quite reasonable, which is less than the density of the Mission Fields Tract located to the west of the commercial district, and substantially less than the density in the City of Carmel. The letters to the editor of Mr. Fisher and Mr. Norberg were unreasonably critical of Willard Branson, our Supervisor. Mr. Branson gave this matter a great deal of study and in his vote indicated his substantial agreement with the good planning decision previously made by the Planning Commission. Mr. Branson exhibited his continuing concern for and interest in good planning in this vote as he has done in the past in connection with such projects as the Rancho Canada Golf Course, which has very effectively and productively preserved a large open space and greenbelt area, which might well have accommodated over two hundred single family residences under the zoning which existed at the time the golf course was started. Good planning is the only effective answer to the continuing pressures for more intensive use of the area surrounding Carmel, and we are fortunate to have dedicated and interested men serving on the Board of Supervisors and the Monterey County Planning Commission.

Very truly yours,
HERBERT C. BAKER

Dear Editor:

In fairness to taxpayers in Carmel, the Carmel City Council last week voted to withdraw from the County Library System effective July 1.

This means that all persons living outside the Carmel city limits can not thereafter use the Carmel library. There are approximately 5,000 readers in the surrounding areas who now use the City Library. Unless some accommodation is made, all these people will have to look for service elsewhere. It will be particularly hard on the many high school and elementary school students whose use of the library will be cut off.

The City Council recognizes the hardship that the withdrawal would cause to the many residents and students who live in the outlying areas of Carmel, and they therefore notified the County Board of Supervisors of their decision. The Supervisors can establish a library tax for the 42nd and 43rd districts, but naturally they will be hesitant to do so unless they receive support from the people who live in these affected areas. The tax would be minimal and would be far outweighed by the benefits.

A letter to Supervisor Branson and a telephone call, or a signature on one of the petitions which will no doubt be circulated, will help to let him know how you feel. Remember, it depends on you and what you feel you need and want.

The Supervisors are not likely to take any action at all, unless they are made aware of the wishes of the people in the areas.

To the Editor:

Attending the Jan. 27 meeting of the City Council on Library problems, I found it regrettable that the use of the acronym MOBAC was not more clearly explained to a very intent and concerned audience.

MOBAC which sounds like an oil company product stands for (Monterey Bay Area Co-operative library system) and is made up of the several libraries in Monterey County who have accepted an agreement with the State to form a co-operative system of interchange of services among its users. It was established with State funds for an experimental period of two years. The problem of continued library services to county residents is closely linked with the continuation of the MOBAC system.

County residents who have discovered the new free availability of library services in Carmel and Monterey as a result of this new co-operation will undoubtedly want to urge its support and continuance. Carmel city tax-payers who find themselves much over-taxed to maintain equitable services for city and county residents, are for this reason asking the county to form a tax assistance district covering the areas of extended county service.

It is to the advantage of everyone on the Peninsula and in Monterey County to have this extended and improved library service. Your county supervisor should hear from you to this effect. Now is the moment...grasp it!

Editor, Carmel Pine Cone:

Pollution—again. So much has been said and written that it seemed there was a near consensus against the Kennedy proposal for an extended sewage outfall into Carmel Bay. But no. The call for bids on the plans as drawn serves notice to us citizens that the project is going ahead rapidly. The Sanitary District allows, vaguely, that this is not final.

There are other proposals, given freely by experts who have no interest except concern for our environment. Apparently these ideas have found reasoned acceptance among the citizens. What do we do about them? No public money has been spent to investigate or to implement them. Instead it appears that our funds are to be spent arbitrarily on the probably useless and possibly harmful outfall—brilliant engineering, perhaps, but lamentable ecology.

Who pays for it all? There is an allocation for the Sanitary District of 34 cents per $100 valuation on the tax bill. The $3 "service charge" on every water bill is allocated to pay off the bonds on the new plant—including the outfall. It seems to me that we need ALL this money for the best possible treatment plant.

Shall we leave it to the engineers or work with the ecologists? We are privileged to live here. I feel we have a responsibility to conserve the area as wisely as possible.

SIGN AROUND town:
"Wet paint. Resist temptation."

AN OLDER Carmel gentleman who does handyman work was viewing photos in a current exhibit. He was overheard muttering, "Some of this stuff is like what we used to draw on the boys' room walls when I was a kid. Now people hang it in the living room for their kids to see!"

"YOU CAN'T tell 'em by their looks!" exclaimed a local meat market operator. As though he still didn't quite believe it, he related what had happened.

The week before, an unkempt very young man had shuffled up to the counter. "I'm broke," he confessed forlornly. "and I'm hungry."

"Here, have a sandwich," offered the market man, handing him one of the fat meat-and-cheese filled luncheon buns his store features. The boy murmured his thanks and wolfed the food.

"No, sir, you can't tell 'em by their looks," repeated the meat cutter. "I never expected to see that kid again, and he just came in and paid me - a week later."

CARL ROHR, who used to own an electrical business on Dolores street where a beauty shop now stands, was seen striding along Ocean avenue the other day, not looking a day older.

Spotting him reminded a Carmel wona, who was a busy doctor's assistant while Mr. Rohr's store was in operation, of a frustrating but amusing episode.

Repeatedly frustrating - the doctor used an examining lamp that required a certain type of bulb, obtainable only at Rohr's. And the only time the assistant was free to buy a replacement was when the doctor had lunch and made hospital calls between noon and 2:00.

So Rohr's was always closed. Finally the assistant sneaked 10 minutes away from the office when it wasn't Rohr's store's lunch hour - and secured the lamp bulb.

"You know, it's pretty inconvenient to try to shop here on my lunch hour," complained the doctor's assistant. "Why does everyone in this shop go to lunch at the same time and close up completely?"

The woman clerk was indignant. "Why we've closed the shop for the same lunch hour for 28 years!"

Citizens Committee warns of overpopulation

With resounding ayes, an audience of more than 100 persons attending the Carmel Citizens Committee annual town meeting last week supported demands of Chairman C.W. Fisher:

"Continue our efforts against over-population."

"Resist overcrowding by objecting to any more freeways in the area."

"Do everything we can to prevent pollution of soil, air and water."

Admiral Fisher identified the major problem in the Carmel area—"one which overrides everything else"—to be the threat of greater population density.

"We want Carmel to be different, not like every other town," he said.

The admiral said local people should not bow lamely to every kind of future statistical projection which routinely suggests thousands more people in the Carmel River watershed area. People living here should do everything possible to protect this specially endowed area from indiscriminate population flow, he said.

Several other speakers during the evening developed the theme of the dangers of development.

Earl Moser, Citizens Committee executive vice president, warned of the potential dangers of air pollution and the grave threat of river flooding. He pointed out that inversion layers lower than the ridges on each side of the narrow valley could hold in air pollution resulting from population increase.

Moser also displayed a page in a book issued in 1967 by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers following a preliminary study of flood perils in the lower Carmel River area.

"Monterey County has no comprehensive flood-plain zoning in effect at the present time, and (yet it has) many examples of improvements (buildings), the location of which shows impudent disregard of nature's capriciousness..."

Moser recalled the statistics covering the 1958 flood which inundated much of the Mission Fields area and much of what were then artichoke fields east of Highway 1. He said the possibility exists—in the Corps of Engineers view—that a flood three times the size of the 1958 one could occur almost any year.

Moser said Carmel citizens could assure themselves of open space for the future by acquiring land such as Flanders Canyon and the Doolittle estate and by fighting use changes on land in Carmel Valley.

The valley's population has increased roughly threefold since 1961, said Moser, and could reach 30,000 people by 1980 if the present growth rate continues. He said there would be as many as 1,800 homes at the valley's mouth if open land, including the Odello artichoke fields, is zoned at six units per acre.

Frequent references and allusions were made during the evening to the Val Verde housing development. The County Board of Supervisors recently broke the one-dwelling-per-acre zoning in the rural Val Verde Road area near the entrance to Carmel. They granted the right to Arbor Development Company of Mountain View to apply for a use permit to construct six-units-per-acre on a seven-and-a-half acre section of land.

The majority of the comments on the board's action were not in favor of the development.

Keith Evans, present member and former chairman of the Monterey County Planning Commission, described his commission's action—which he said had been unanimous—in advising the supervisors to change the Val Verde area zoning from one-unit-per-acre to six-units-per-acre.

Evans said the commission felt that the rezoning was justified because values in the area had been rising. On more general grounds, he said people could not be refused through the device of zoning to have chance to live in this area.

Evans added, however, that it was not his commission, but the supervisors, who have the power to rezone.

Evans added that new legislation may be needed in the fight against high density development of open space.

"Planning commissions are bound by state laws and court decisions," he said.

"Lately the courts have been overturning low-density zoning as discriminatory, because it doesn't make land available to the average person."

In reference to Moser's flood warning, Evans said that three previous attempts to pass flood-plain zoning failed because they were not supported by Carmel Valley residents.

"I know of no regulations that would allow a planning commission to impose low density zoning because of a potential pollution problem," Evans said. "I think we need legislation like that."

K.D. McGinnis, newly elected vice president of the Rancho Rio Vista Property Owners Association, emphasized the threat to the peace and quiet and to the rural beauty of the area posed by the Val Verde development. He felt that a serious petition effort should be made to ask the supervisors to reconsider and reverse their ruling.

Summarizing Citizens Committee activities over the past year, Admiral Fisher made these points:

—The committee backed the campaign for passage of the sewer district bonds.

—The committee sponsored a non-partisan candidate night before elections.

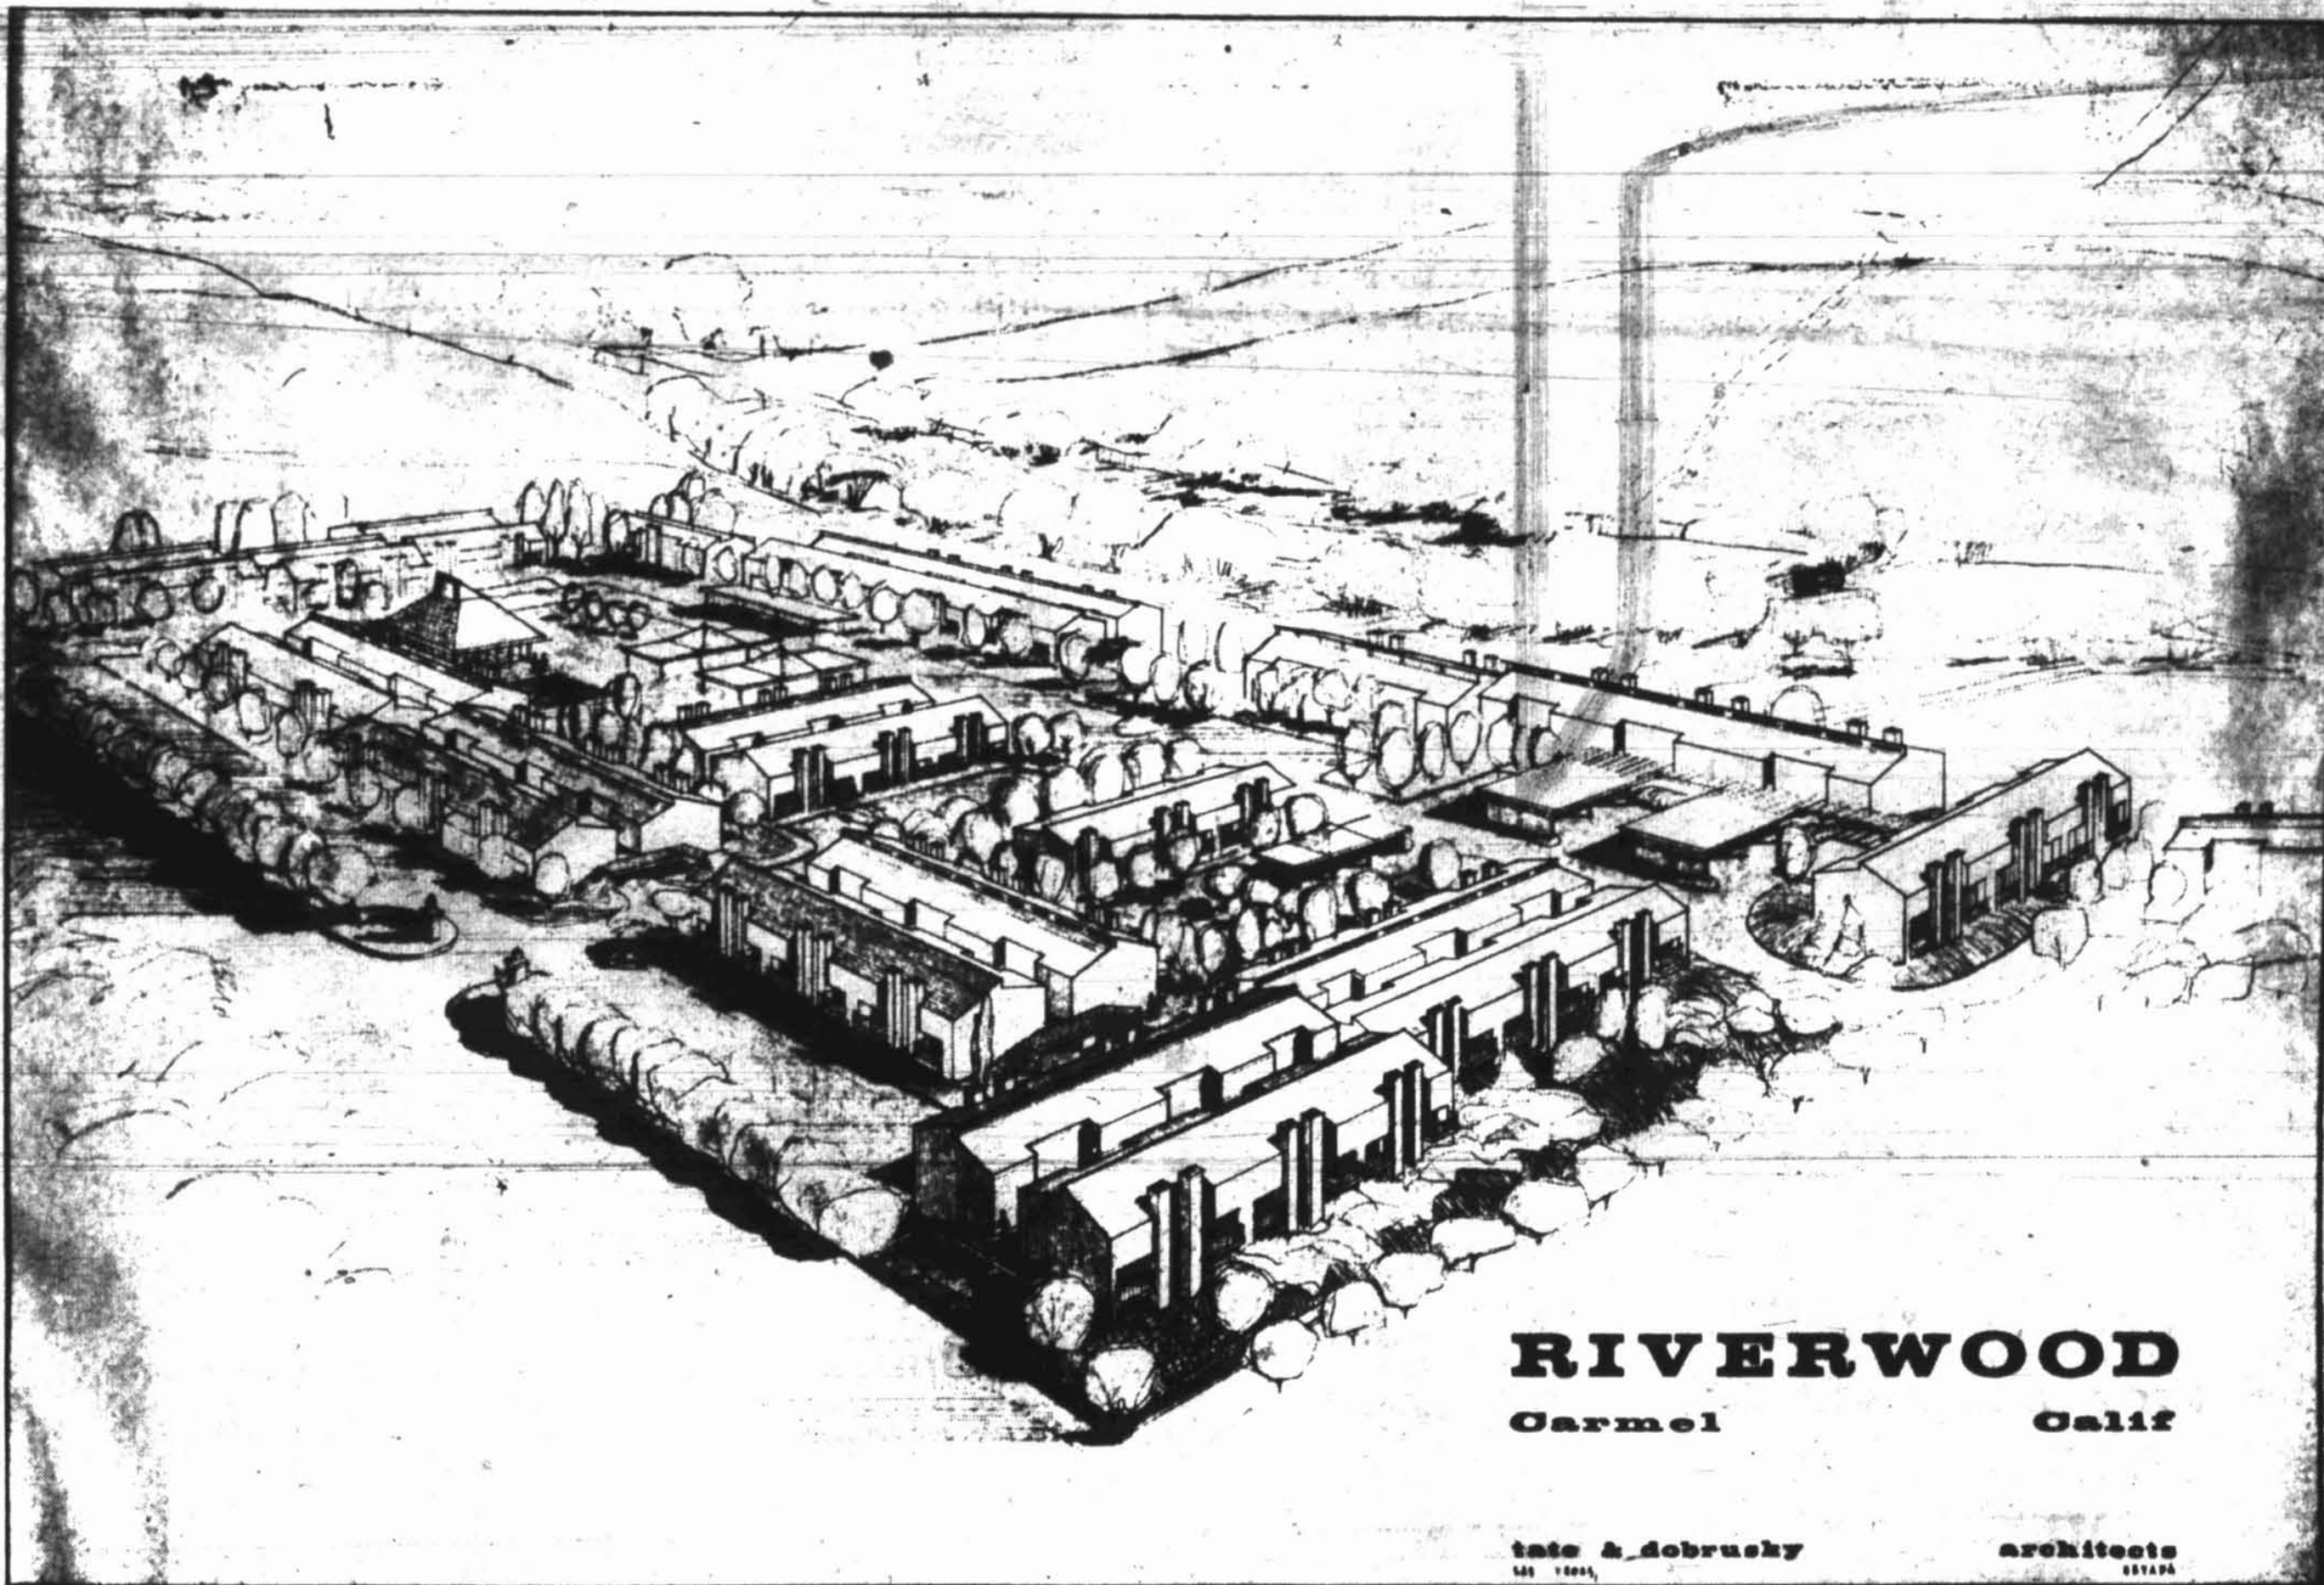

—As part of a continuing effort to keep too much commercialism out of Carmel, the committee resisted the proposal for another gasoline station at the southwest corner of Sixth and Junipero and encouraged what has become Ordinance 229 limiting to eight the number of gasoline stations in Carmel.

—Efforts were continued to limit the size and bulk of business buildings in Carmel. The committee recommended 8,000 square feet as a limit. "The plan developing for 10,000 square feet is probably all we can hope for," said Admiral Fisher. "We hope it is enacted."

—"Carmel is limited in size, beautiful in aspect, special and peculiar in its habits and desires," said the admiral. "The big danger is overcrowding. We have reached here population saturation. We are cutting our own throats and spoiling the area for coming generations if we break the current limit of houses per acre."

—The committee is interested in reactivating the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan and its planning commission. "This is a most valuable tool to set forth ideas of land use and future development," said Admiral Fisher.

Plans move ahead for apartments near mouth of Valley

Riverwood, a condominium development planned alongside the Carmel River at the end of Rio Road, will offer 150 units for occupancy by February, 1972. The development will co-occupy the KRML radio tower site. Rio Road will be extended 630 feet and the development located south of the extension to the river.

The Carmel Planning Commission first glimpsed plans for the 15.16 acre development last week upon referral from the County Planning Commission. The county will consider the plans later this month. The Carmel planners reviewed the plans without comment.

The development will have a density of 10 units per acre. The units will appear to be 2½ stories high when viewed from the road and will be surrounded by 377 parking spaces, some underground, according to Carl Hooper of George Bestor and Associates.

Plans for the development were begun in 1966 and rezoning was obtained in 1969, said Hooper. The site adjoins a similar proposed development called Carmel Lago which was approved two years ago but which still awaits construction.

Plans for Riverwood were sent to a committee for study and report at the Carmel Planning Commission's Feb. 17 meeting.

Stop-gap ordinance on tree-cutting presented to city fathers

"It's merely a stop-gap," Forestry Commission Chairman Raymond Taylor said of a proposal to restrict tree cutting on private property.

The proposal, placed by the commission before the City Council last night, requires a permit from the city forester before a tree may be cut on a vacant lot or a lot the owner plans to subdivide.

The proposal also restricts cutting on a lot where remodelling of an existing building is to be done.

Taylor, who drafted the proposal with Forester Commissioner Matt Smith, said stricter regulations must await results of a tree survey, also proposed recently by the commission.

A count by city blocks of trees on private property in Carmel will be carried out by the city forester over a four or five year period.

The survey is scheduled to start this spring, said

Taylor.

"The survey should give us an answer to what kind of ordinance is needed," said Taylor. "It might even turn out that the trees on private property are doing better than the city trees."

Taylor said he didn't know yet whether a more comprehensive ordinance would have to await completion of the full survey.

"We won't know until the commission works over the plans for the survey," he said. "Perhaps we will have a sample survey for the first year that could indicate whether or not a stricter ordinance is needed. We haven't decided yet."

The loss of the city forest through unregulated private cutting has been regularly debated in city government circles for the past several months.

Attempts to regulate cutting have been countered by cautions against intruding on property rights.

It is generally conceded by members of the forestry commission, forestry department and city council that the greatest danger to the forest is the leveling of vacant lots by new owners.

The proposal before the council last night deals directly with vacant lot problem.

The text of the proposal reads as follows:

The Forestry Commission considers it necessary to prevent the unnecessary stripping of trees from vacant lots, in preparation for building, or for remodelling, or from lots subdivided from larger lots on which there are buildings. It does not, at this time, consider it necessary to control cutting of trees on other private property. A census of trees will be made and the results will indicate whether any further controls are needed.

The Forestry Commission recommends to the City Council the following addition to Part IX, Division 3 of the Code:

Article 1A. Cutting and Removal of Trees on Private Property.

1232. Regulation of the cutting of trees on vacant lots and on lots where remodeling or subdividing is to be done. It shall be unlawful to cut down or otherwise destroy or authorize the destruction or cutting down of any tree larger than two inches in diameter at breast height situated on a vacant lot or on any lot where remodeling of an existing building is to be done, or on a lot subdivided from an existing lot on which there is a building or buildings; without a permit from the City Forester.

1232.01 Before issuing a permit the building inspector will inform the builder of the law governing removal of trees, and will notify the city forester of the request for a permit.

1232.02 Applications for authority to remove trees where a city forester's permit is required shall be filed with the city administrators on forms provided for the purpose. Tree removal permits issued under this article will require no fee.

1232.03 Removal of trees, without a permit as required above, will be a misdemeanor and shall be grounds for construction or remodeling of buildings or for subdividing land.

1232.1 Any appeal from a decision of the city forester shall be made to the Forestry Commission in the manner described under Article I, 1231.01.

Hatton Canyon highway project priority drops

The Hatton Canyon highway project has dropped to about 15th place on a list of priorities maintained at state highway district headquarters in San Luis Obispo.

Bob Horton, public relations officer at the office, says the deemphasis results from a shortage of funds and opposition to the project demonstrated locally in the past several years.

"We don't expect any developments on the Hatton Canyon project at least until the end of this decade," said Horton. "We've got lots of other projects that need is just as great and where there's no opposition."

Monterey County road commissioner Bruce McLain concurs.

"The chronic shortage of funds for Monterey County is even more acute," said McLain.

The state legislature recently shifted five percent of highway funds from northern to southern California, he explained.

"Unfortunately when dollars are limited things really have to get bad before something's done," he said.

County priority is now directed at Highway 1 in the Fort Ord-Marina area, said Horton.

Both officials felt that congestion on Highway 1 particularly at the high school -- will eventually encourage renewed interest in the canyon project.

"But not until it becomes intolerable," added McLain.

FILM PROGRESS

Portia Mansfield, the Carmel producer of the mountain-climbing film, "And the Ground Below," reports progress in distributing the film.

One copy was recently sent east for ten days of showing in St. Louis at private and public schools and two weeks in Cleveland before bookings on the East Coast.

Meanwhile, Ray Palmer, technical advisor for the film, is showing a copy to mountaineering and skiing clubs in California.

Sister M. Ignatius at the Santa Catalina School for Girls in Monterey, one of the first places the film has been shown, sent Miss Mansfield the following note of appreciation:

"Thank you very much for showing us the film 'And the Ground Below.' We (both the faculty and girls who saw it) were really uplifted by the experience of seeing it, both because of the extraordinarily beautiful photography and because of the message which came through.

"When the film is available again we would like to have another showing. Those who saw it talked about it so much that others who did not have the chance to come want to see it too."

The first local public showing of the film is scheduled at the Tantomount Theatre in Carmel Valley in April.

The music corner

BY IRVING W. GREENBERG, Ph.D.

Gilbert Boyer, in presenting the first of a series of five piano recitals, on Tuesday last, Jan. 26, at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, approached the piano literature in an interesting and unique manner.

There was a section relating to comparisons of the same-titled work by various composers; a section devoted to a composer profile of Portugal, Ivo Cruz; a section devoted to comparison of bell compositions by various composers; and a section devoted to American composers. In addition, two small works of Padre Casanovas and Padre Soler, of the eighteenth century, and Beethoven's Piano Sonata, Op. 2-No. 3.

Mr. Boyer preceded each section with comments relative to the composers and their music.

Of paramount interest was the compositions of Ivo Cruz, called "homages"; one to Richard Struass (on a theme from Til Eulenspiegel); to Manuel de Falla (on a theme from the Nights in the Gardens of Spain); and to Oscar da Silva, a modern Portuguese composer. It was indeed a pleasure to hear these unknown works in this country. The polytonality of these were very well expressed by Mr. Boyer, and left no doubt as to the importance of this music.

The two works by the Spanish monks, Padre Casanovas and Padre Soler (the latter showing the influence of Scarlelli at the court of Madrid) are little gems and were indeed uniquely presented.

In the comparison of the Fantasias of Bach, Mozart and Chopin, one felt the dynamic pitch veering from the majestic to the lyrical to the romantic. It was an unusual comparison that lumped together the facets of the various composers, and they came through in an integrated and defined manner.

The bell compositions of Couperin (The Bells of Cythere), of Liszt (La Campanella) and Debussy (The Sunken Cathedral) fared just as well, with the impressionistic composition of Debussy holding first place and the bombastic interpretation of Liszt being in the second category of interest. The Couperin seemed less well defined.

The section on the American composers featured Two Night Songs of Hascal Stewart, a Carmel composer. These works were brief, but of unusual beauty of composition and presentation. The White Peacock of Griffes and the Cat and the Mouse of Copland are well-known and were given a well-received performance by Mr. Boyer.

What a great conductor can get out of an orchestra is simply fantastic. And that is exactly what Lorin Maazel did when he guest-conducted the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra last week.

The program included Beethoven's Overture, The Consecration of the House; the Bartok Deux Images, Op. 10; The La Valse of Ravel, based on the Viennese Waltz.

The main work, the Sibelius' Symphony No. 5 in E flat major, Op. 82, shows this composer at his best. The three movements were sharply defined, with the second (andante) most incisively and beautifully expressed. The orchestra responded to every motion and gesture of Mr. Maazel.

The Junior League of the Monterey Peninsula, Inc., in cooperation with the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra conducted by Haymo Taeuber, will present its Concerts for Youth Saturday at 11:00 a.m. in the Monterey Peninsula College Gymnasium and at 2:30 p.m. in the Salinas High School auditorium. This is one of the rare opportunities for children of our county to enjoy good live orchestral music.

The two winners from the 1971 Young Artists Auditions will appear with the symphony orchestra.

The concert is specifically planned for third through eighth grade students. Younger children are welcome to attend if accompanied by an adult.

The concerts are free of charge to the public and will be well supervised by the Junior League members.

The Monterey Peninsula Concert Association will present Anthony de Bonaventura, pianist, at the Pacific Grove Junior High School Auditorium at 8:15 p.m., Monday evening, as the fourth concert of the current season.

In the 1967-1968 season, Anthony de Bonaventura made his Carnegie Hall debut with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra, and performed again with the New York Philharmonic at Lincoln Center under William Steinberg. The next season he played with the Pittsburgh and San Francisco Symphonies, among others.

Of his appearance in San Francisco, playing the Bartok First Piano Concerto, the "Chronicle" wrote: "A formidable pianist. He showed musical and technical command in this as to make others' achievements in the usual Liszt, Chopin, Rachmaninoff vehicles assume slighter proportions."

The concert will include works by Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Kodaly, and Rachmaninoff.

Attendance at the concert is limited to members of the association, and to members of similar associations on a space available basis.

An appreciative audience heard a sonata recital Saturday night at Sunset Center, to benefit financially-troubled Hopkins Marine Station in Pacific Grove.

Dr. Welton Lee, a marine biologist at the station who is also a talented violinist, played a program of Mozart, Brahms and Prokofiev with accompaniment by pianist Camille Olaeta.

The recital was sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society.

The Carmel Pine Cone

SECTION II

Remember When?

50 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, Feb. 3, 1921:

Contractor Parkes has concluded the construction of the Boyce residence in south Carmel.

Noah Whitney left early Monday morning by auto for Los Angeles. He will be away about ten days.

Dr. Amelia L. Gates, of San Francisco, well known in Carmel, was a guest at Hotel La Playa last week.

Rev. and Mrs. Fred Sheldon motored to Watsonville to visit friends last Monday, and returned home the same evening.

Mrs. Charles Clark is in San Francisco this week, a delegate from All Saints to the convention of the House of Churchwomen.

The hot tamales at Curtis' are beyond our vocabulary to describe, the increasing demand and daily shortage tells the story.

The County Treasurer reports the following amount on hand in funds concerning Carmel: Sunset School bond, $35.21; Carmel Sanitary bond, $1,680.92; sanitary expenses, $291.44.

The giant pear on exhibition in the Pine Cone's Ocean avenue window is the gift of Mrs. Charles Clark. It was produced in Redding, and is evidence of the agricultural possibilities of that remarkably fertile region.

25 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, Feb. 1, 1946:

A one-man show for Phil Nesbitt, Carmel artist, opens at Gump's Gallery in San Francisco, February 6.

"This is for my fire laddies," said Mother Fletcher (Mrs. Etta C. Fletcher). She is 82 years old and yesterday she climbed the stairs to City Clerk Peter Mawdsley's office to contribute a dollar to the fund that Fire Commissioner Frank Hefling is raising to buy a radio-phonograph for the Carmel Volunteer Fire Department.

As signers of the We Want John petitions reached the nine hundred mark, rumor began to circulate around town yesterday that Robert Grey, contender for the cancelled John Roscelli garbage contract, had started a petition of his own, which states that the signers want Robert, because Roscelli leaves the lids off garbage cans.

Through the efforts of Ernest Calley, Sunset School shop instructor, the cutting of Monterey County redwoods will be placed under state regulation.

At the request of the County Planning Commission, W.T. Mahar is calling a meeting of Carmel Unincorporated, and Corum Jackson is inviting interested Carmel citizens to a public meeting Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock at the home of General Joseph Stilwell on Inspiration Avenue.

Purpose of the joint meeting is to discover the community reaction to a request made last week by Ashton Stanley that the Mission Ranch be rezoned so that he may enlarge and remodel the restaurant, night club and bar.

10 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, Feb. 2, 1961:

The Carmel Art Association decided yesterday afternoon to continue planning for an artist in residence project. Mrs. Fritz Wurzmann, chairman, appointed Nelo Drizari, Geza St. Galy, Hazel McLellan to draw up a specific program.

National news items last week contained items of personal interest to two local persons.

Mrs. Valerio Giusi was delighted to learn of the release of RB47 flier Captain Freeman Olmstead. She has known the Olmstead family since student days at Syracuse University.

Dr. Talcott Bates was interested to learn that his step-sister, Dr. Janet Travell, has been appointed the first White House woman physician by President Kennedy.

Mrs. Alice Boulter, Camino Real between Ninth and Tenth Avenues, asked the Pine Cone yesterday to request Carmel owners of large dogs to make sure they are confined before leaving them unattended.

Stunning is the only word to describe the Bonnie Cashin spring collection that has begun to arrive at KRAMER'S. This designer's famed versatility with colors and textures is evidenced throughout, notably in a multi-colored poncho of light-as-down wool and, wool again, in a marvelous ice-cream plaid suit and separate coat. The all-weather coat sketched uses the new finest cotton-poplin Grenfell Cloth from England, signatured with leather.

Two styles, one hooded, in three new colors... Turf, Pheasant and Robin Red. Kramer's of Carmel on Ocean Avenue near Lincoln. 624-4088.

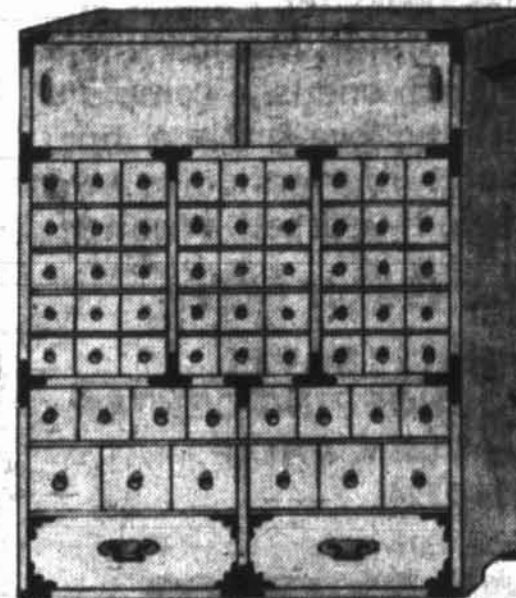

The Forward Look "Marina '71", young sophisticated coordinates by Frank-Lee. The double-breasted jacket sketched is in navy with white detail and costs $20. They're busy these days packing a lovely assortment of Valentine Heart boxes at CARMEL CANDIES.

Their own chocolates...

A potpourri of Japanese Folk Art Antiques will be exhibited and offered for sale beginning this weekend at the THUNDERBIRD. Typical is the 61 drawer apothecary chest sketched here.

You'll be intrigued by the shop signs with their carved characters and the musical tones of the bronze temple bells. Although the Japanese people made and used these pieces to serve specific utilitarian purposes in their homes and businesses they are nonetheless decorative. The THUNDERBIRD BOOK STORE is located on Carmel Valley Road near Quail Lodge. Open every day. Phone 624-1803.

With the advent of the Carmel Festival of the French Films Feb. 9, 10 and 11, a flurry of French parties is forming. Monterey Peninsula internationalists are planning a full schedule of luncheons, cocktail and dinner parties to honor visiting French dignitaries, who will arrive to lend their presence to this exciting French cultural event. This is, clearly, to be a splendid French week in Carmel, and, for all who feel the need, now is the time to consult your Larousse.

Mrs. Jerome Carlson, president of the Alliance Francaise, will be the hostess at a luncheon on Tuesday to honor Jean Louis Bertucelli, French film producer; Yvette Mallet, director of Le Cinema Francais in New York City; Madame Theodore Bradley, Mrs. Jacqueline Flavin, and Dean Doudakin, three past presidents of the Alliance. Also Robert Blaisdell and Ronald Bostwick, California film makers who are presently making a film on Henry Miller, Mrs. Frederick Caltrin, of Pebble Beach, Emmy Vann, writer and correspondent to French language newspapers in San Francisco, who also has a weekend home in Carmel Valley and Heinz Hubler, director of Community Services at Monterey Peninsula College.

The luncheon will be held at the Del Monte Lodge, followed by a tour of the Del Monte Forest and the Seventeen Mile Drive to give the honored visitors the opportunity to see one of America's finest hotels and scenic wonders.

The president and the board of directors of the Alliance Francaise will be host to an invitational cocktail and buffet party Feb. 9th at the Presidio. On Feb. 10, Mrs. Jacqueline Flavin and Mrs. Jerome Carlson, present and past presidents of the Alliance, will be hostesses at a champagne buffet party at Mrs. Flavin's town house in Carmel Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Adams and Mrs. Jerome Carlson will entertain on Feb. 11 to honor Mr. and Mrs. Jean Henri Donnard, Conseiller Culturel at the French Embassy in Washington, D.C., and Ronald Husson, French cultural attache in San Francisco. Their party is to give artists and writers of this area the opportunity to meet all of the French visitors.

The Monterey County Symphony Guild is sponsoring "Symphony d'Elegance", a cocktail, luncheon and fashion show to be held at the Del Monte Lodge on Tuesday, Mar. 16.

The fashions shown will be exclusively from I. Magnin's spring collection. Cocktails will be served at 11:30, and luncheon at 12:30.

General chairman of this event is Mrs. Kenneth H. Gardner. Her assistant chairmen are Mrs. Lou McMahan, decorations; Mrs. Mark Raggett and Mrs. Hy Henning, hostesses; Mrs. John W. Speyer, luncheon hostess; Mrs. Norman Borden, models; Mrs. Charles D. Richardson Jr., music; Mrs. Avery Tompkins, programs; Mrs. Chester Malcolm Stratton, prizes; Mrs. Lee Darragh and Mrs. Harry Lusignan, publicity; Mrs. Richard Shaw, sponsors; and Mrs. James Morse, ticket chairman.

Tickets, at $8.50, will be sold on a first-come basis.

GUITAR

Classical guitarist David Grimes, whose repertoire spans five centuries, will appear in recital tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the Monterey Peninsula College Theater.

His program will include selections from Renaissance works to modern, baroque to impressionistic.

RECEPTION

A reception will be held Feb. 11 from 7-10 p.m. at the Great Mont-Grove Craft Guild Gallery, 120 Central Ave., Pacific Grove, for Dorothee Brown, Dick Crispo and Jim Crane, whose paintings and sculpture will be exhibited.

By JUDITH A. EISNER

Puppies are remarkably egocentric little animals. Much as they love their humans, they love themselves more.

From the time a puppy is born, his entire being is dedicated to fulfilling his instincts and desires. At first, these instincts are for food and warmth, so the infant puppy nurses and sleeps all day long.

As the puppy matures, his eyes and ears open and he learns to navigate. He begins to store up information about the outside world; he begins to learn.

In addition to eating and sleeping, he is now learning to be a dog. Puppies at play together are actually practicing inherited canine behavior. They "play" at fighting and stalking and mating. It is said that puppies denied play with the opposite sex never develop into truly male or female dogs.

By the time you get a puppy, at approximately eight weeks of age, he has accumulated a lot of learning. He should know that humans are friendly, that they provide food and petting and playmates. What he may not yet know is that in return they demand certain things from the puppy.

Just as we don't expect obedience or responsible actions from our own infants, we don't expect them of very young puppies. But as human babies and canine alike grow up, there are rules to be learned and acceptable behavior patterns to learn. With puppies, as with babies, consistency and firmness and patience are the catchwords to successful training.

There are two kinds of dog training. One is formal obedience training that teaches a dog useful disciplines such as walking on a leash, sitting, lying down, coming when called, staying put on command. Every well-trained dog should know these lessons and should be able to obey them.

The second kind of training is what we refer to as "civilizing" the puppy and it concerns itself with turning that egocentric little beast into a well-behaved member of the family.

A dog may win every obedience degree granted by the American Kennel Club and still be an absolute hoodlum in the house. Sound incredible? It isn't. And it is never the fault of the dog, but always the fault of the owner.

A civilized dog never jumps up on people, except by invitation, if you wish him to. He never greets people by crashing lovingly into their chests or stomachs, or by patting at their clothes with muddy paws.

A civilized dog never begs for food at the table. He does not snatch or steal food when your back is turned.

A civilized dog stays off the furniture unless you want him on it. You cannot train a dog to do one thing some of the time and another thing the rest of the time. If you want your dog on the couch, that means that he will be welcome there whether or not you are in the room, and whether or not there is company in the house.

A civilized dog does not chew or tear or destroy your property. He does not filch shoes or gloves or scarves to tear into pieces when your back is turned; he does not sharpen his teeth on the piano leg either.

How do you create this paragon of canine virtue?

You can only create a civilized dog if you want one. If you think it's perfectly all right to be bowled over by Poochie when you come home, you'll never be able to convince the dog that it's undesirable behavior.

If you can't resist his soulful eyes accusing you of heartlessness at the dinner table, you'll never be able to discourage him from begging.

If you think he has a right to share the sofa or bed, he'll certainly agree with you.

So, first of all, you have to decide what kind of dog you want. We know people who are absolutely delighted with their totally undisciplined, untrained, uncontrolled animals. Others expect more. And get it.

To teach your dog manners, you discourage undesirable habits and encourage good ones. Consistently. You convey to the dog your displeasure when he jumps up on people by knocking him off balance with your knee when he jumps up and enforcing this with a "NO! Bad boy!" You encourage him to keep all four feet on the ground and kneel down to greet him.

You find the words that convey your displeasure when he begs and order him from the table. "NO! Go lie down," might be the command. And you NEVER give him so much as a sliver from your plate. You insist that your guests resist the impulse as well. If you are consistent, eventually the dog will learn that he's not going to get anything, that you mean what you say.

You chase him off the furniture the first time he gets on it, lead him to his blanket or bed and pet him when he lies down there. And every time he tries to get onto the couch, you scold him until he gets the point.

Dogs don't like to be scolded; they want to be praised. If you have the strength of character to insist on proper behavior, plus the patience to enforce it, the dog will learn.

If you once let up and permit a lapse, you will have lost all the ground you gained. The dog won't believe you mean it next time you scold him and you will have created a confused dog who has only learned that he can get away with things if he's persistent enough. If you're not capable of persistence, you can be sure he will be!

The 60 mph motel

While the average motel is all very nice in its place, it has a monotonous habit of staying in its place.

You don't have to put up with that.

With a VW Campmobile, you can always leave the place you're in without ever leaving the lodgings you're in. The lodgings go where you go.

Although the lodgings aren't exactly plush, they're very cozy. You'll find a full length double bed, a child's bed, a hammock and a cot. As well as closets, curtains, worktables and a reading lamp.

There's even a kitchenette. Complete with a cupboard, a dining table, an icebox and a sink.

The complete cost (including the optional pop-up top and tent) is $4047.50.*

By ALICE WOLFE

A VISIT TO the Emile Norman Gallery on Mission at Sixth offers a soaring lift in spirit. This artist's originality of design, materials and individual expression is a unique experience.

He is a sculptor, mosaicist and printmaker. What immediately speaks to the viewer is his attunement with nature, and with what a thoughtful eye for design he interprets his insight.

It would be impossible to describe here the method by which Emile created a life size raccoon, completely inlaid with thousands of tiny pieces of various woods. The inlays represent perfectly the gradations and color of hair, footclaws and even the lifelike facial expression of the raccoon. That collectors wait for years for a work of his inlaid wood mosaic sculptures is no surprise.

In 1965, Emile went on a safari into the African bush country to observe the animals and the land. Hanging in his gallery presently are some lithographs derived from a whole series of African paintings—the results of that trip. The entire original collection of paintings was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. E. Richard Carleton. The African animals series in these lithographs are painted realistically, but with a grace and elegance that includes the background flora. The whole picture is a wonderful design reminiscent of the all-over design of French tapestries.

There are also bronze statues, including one of famed photographer Josef Karsh, authoress Isak Dinesen, and a loving St. Francis as well as birds, fishes and animals.

HELEN DOOLEY, well known Carmel artist, has interrupted her daily work schedule of painting to prepare for a lecture to be given Feb. 13. She has been invited to speak to the Pen Women of America, a national organization of artists and writers in San Francisco.

Following that, another engagement is scheduled for April. It will be a demonstration and lecture in Sonoma, to be presented to the Sonoma Art Association.

The change of pace is in keeping with her former habits as professor of art at Scripps College, art supervisor for Kern County Schools, and a professor of art at the University of Pacific, at Stockton.

She is hard to catch at her gallery on San Carlos at Sixth, for she usually is painting at home.

Helen is undergoing a radical change in her style. Formerly very much of an impressionist and expressionist, she is now leaning to a new realism.

Figures are her main interest. Her latest paintings are abstract in pattern, with a realistic composition within an abstract whole.

A new series of paintings, a derivative of her trip last January to Mexico, is in progress. Mexican guitar players, beach scenes, and landscapes, all with figures predominating, are evolving into her new insight.

Helen says, "I haven't come out with it yet, but I'm working and thinking it out." A recent painting is "Two for the Show" a fine indicator of things to come, centrally located, in the main gallery at the Carmel Art Association, on Dolores.

THE TWELFTH ANNUAL Beacon House Art Auction will be held Sunday, Mar. 28, at the Outrigger Restaurant on Cannery Row.

The paintings for this auction are donated by area artists to benefit the Beacon House to further its development in the aid of alcoholics.

A preview party will be held the evening before the sale, also at the Outrigger from 7 to 9, to enable art lovers to select the paintings they would like to bid on.

Mrs. Robert Menist of Carmel is general chairman; her co-chairman is Mrs. Andrew Kozak of Carmel.

The list of contributing painters is a list of "who's who in painting" on the Monterey Peninsula.

The following Carmel artists have donated their paintings: Fritz Abplanalp, Avis Ballard, Clarence Bates, George Bleich, Dorothy Bigger, Howard Bradford, Ferdinand Burgdozoff, Bert Conaghan, Jesse W. Corsaut, James Peter Cost, Albert Crundall, John Cunningham, Patricia Cunningham, Robert Davey, Ephraim Doner, Linford Donovan, Wayne Dye, Roger R. Fandell, Joe Feuerborn, Joseph Frame, Beth Garcia, Ellwood Graham, Ron Graves, Thornton Harby, Sam Harris, Lucille L. Herbert, Shirley Holt, Ralph Jacobs, Joyce Faye Jenkins, Nancy Johnson, Polly Kahle, Elizabeth Keatings, Andrew Kozak, James Kramer, Irene Lagorio, Zyta Laky, Harold Landaker, deceased, Mabel Landaker, Keith Linberg, Reginald Machado, Royden Martin, Harriet Mayland, Malcolm Moran, John Bait Morse, Emile Norman, Henry L. Pancher, Ned Pankin, contributed by the Zantman gallery, Stanley Pearce, Richard Pystor, Gilbert Adam Schoenbrod, Harold Sheehan, Hans Skank, jr., Richard Tette, Eugene Towne, Jerry Van Megert and Edward Norton Ward.

Presbyterian churches to discuss sharing

The three Presbyterian churches of the Monterey Peninsula are planning a three-week study series on the Church of Christ Uniting (COCU).

COCU is a long-term project attempting to unite various denominations at administrative levels, according to the Rev. Keith Jackson, assistant pastor at Carmel Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Cary N. Weisiger III, senior pastor at Menlo Park Presbyterian Church, will introduce the subject this Sunday at the Carmel

Presbyterian Church.

A panel discussion the following Sunday at El Estero Presbyterian Church will be presented by the Revs. Joseph R. Allen, pastor, Hays Christian Methodist Episcopal Church; James W. Brock, rector, St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church; Wm. R. Hett, pastor, Church of the Oaks (United Church of Christ); Keith Jackson, assistant minister in charge of Christian Education, Carmel Presbyterian Church; Herbert Neale, pastor, Church of the Wayfarer (United Methodist Church); Ed Weakland, pastor, Christian Church of Pacific Grove (Disciples of Christ).

The panel will be moderated by Mrs. Arthur Hayler, chairman of the Ecumenical Mission and Relations Committee of the Synod of the Golden Gate.

On Feb. 21 at the First Presbyterian Church of Monterey, the series will conclude with an ecumenical service presented by Dr. Boyce van Osdel, senior pastor of First Baptist Church, Oakland. Dr. van Osdel's church is one of six forming the Downtown Oakland Neighborhood Parish which is implementing many COCU ideas.

Each session begins at 7:30 p.m.

There will be an opportunity for discussion after each presentation.

The series was arranged by Hisao Yamanishi of El Estero, the Rev. Jackson and Mrs. Deryck G. Nuckton, First Presbyterian Church of Monterey.

Dr. Weisiger, Sunday's speaker, has been a member of the United Presbyterian Committee of Nine in Consultation on Church Union with Episcopalians, Methodists, Disciples, Evangelical United Brethren and United Church of Christ since 1961.

In 1966 he helped found Counterpart, an organization of blacks and whites working for racial understanding, justice and equal opportunity on the mid-Peninsula.

Dr. Weisiger, born Jan. 11, 1910, is married and has four children. He received his A.B. from Princeton University in 1931, spent the years 1931-34 in India teaching at the Allahabad Christian College and serving for a year and eight months as honorary superintendent of the Naini Leper Home.

He received his Th.B. degree from Westminster Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, Pa., in 1937, and Doctor of Divinity degree from Muskigum College in 1950.

His pastorates from 1937 to the present include ones in Pennsylvania, Virginia, Georgia, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Menlo Park, where he presently serves.

From 1958-62 Dr. Weisiger was on the general council of his church's General Assembly; in 1960 he was moderator at Pittsburgh Presbytery; in 1966 he was one of four U.S. observers at Anglican-Presbyterian Conversations in Edinburgh, Scotland; in 1969, he was moderator, San Francisco Presbytery.

Dr. Weisiger also preached in 1962 at U.S. Army and Air Force bases in North Germany.

DM security officers win commendation

Officers Paul Crossman and Hank Ballard of the Del Monte Security Force were presented with letters of commendation last Thursday expressing appreciation for their acts of heroism in saving the life of a forest resident from a smoke-filled home on Dec. 4, by the Del Monte Forest Home Owners Association represented by President Fred M. Dodd and Vice President Maj. Gen. Edwin H. J. Carris.

After locating the victim she was brought out in an unconscious state and revived with the aid of a resuscitator before being taken to the hospital.

Several years ago the residents of the forest were asked by the Home Owners Association to make contributions toward the purchase of a resuscitator. The response was so generous that it was possible to buy two which together with an additional unit provided by Del Monte Properties Co. permits each patrol car in service to have a unit at all times, Dodd said.

"The heroism of Officers Crossman and Ballard have earned the respect and appreciation of all forest residents," said Mr. Dodd.

VISION CARE

BY DR. R.E. MARLIN
(consulting optometrist)

Q: Can eye exercises improve your vision?

A: Visual training, or "eye exercises" is an effective and necessary means of caring for many visual problems. It is designed to produce comfortable and effective seeing - not to get rid of necessary lenses. All eyes do not automatically learn to function perfectly, while others seem to lose some skill over a period of time. When coordination, rapid and accurate eye adjustments are not possible, the result is headache, low achievement, fatigue. Many visual problems of both children and adults are of this type and require visual training whether or not glasses are worn.

The "throw away your glasses" idea is appealing - but unfortunately not scientifically sound. The person who discards his glasses thinks he sees better without them because of his motivation or dislike for eyeglasses.

A French Film Festival offering Peninsula premieres of recently released films which have been highly praised in France and in New York, will be held in Carmel Feb. 9, 10 and 11.

Sponsored by the Alliance Francaise of the Monterey Peninsula in cooperation with Monterey Peninsula College, the Festival offers a rare treat to cinema fans to view outstanding works by some of France's best known film makers.

The net proceeds from the Festival will be allocated to the scholarship program of the Alliance Francaise. Since its inception four years ago, the program has assisted more than 12 students of French, one of whom was given the opportunity to live in Paris.

All of the films are in the French language with English subtitles.

The first offering in the Festival, on Tuesday, Feb. 9, is "La Maison des Bories" (A Stranger in the House), by Jacques Doniel Valcroze. This is a romantic story of a love triangle involving a famous geologist, his wife, and a visitor who creates a situation which resolves itself in an unusual ending.

"Remparts d'Argile" (Ramparts of Clay) will be shown on Wednesday. The plot for this film is laid in Tunisia. It is a highly dramatic story of a young woman awakening to social consciousness in a backward village at the time of the independence of Tunisia and Algeria.

The final day of the Festival, to be held at Carmel's Village Theatre on Dolores, will be highlighted by the presentation of "Le Claiz de Terre" (Earth Light), directed by Guy Gilles. Although different in character than "Ramparts of Clay," this film is also concerned with North Africa.

It is a poignant story of a little boy, who, with his mother and father, is uprooted from his native village, and, in a dreary slum, longs to go back home. Laced with vivid reality, the film features actual people as actors.

All the films will be shown twice daily in matinee at 2 p.m. and again at 7:30 p.m.

Among three other films to be shown with each of the above, is "L'Eden et Apres" by Alain Robbe-Grillet, who made the highly acclaimed "Last Year at Marienbad."

The director of "Ramparts of Clay," Jean-Louis Bertucelli will be in Carmel for the Festival, with other important personalities associated with the French Film Office. They will appear before each performance or during intermission each evening.

Tickets, at $2 for each performance, may be obtained in advance at the theatre.

For further information, interested persons should call 624-3195.

TO SANTA BARBARA

Mrs. Marie Morse traveled to Santa Barbara last weekend to visit her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F.B. Morse III. Young Mrs. Morse is the daughter of the Frank Lloyds.

VICE CHAIRMAN

Tom May, Jr., of Carmel, was named vice-chairman of the Republican Central Committee of Monterey at a special organizing meeting in late January. May is a former Carmel city councilman.

Appointed to the group to fill two vacancies in this area were Carmel City Attorney William Burleigh and Dewey Evans of Pebble Beach. A local planner who previously was Monty Harrington, for business reasons.

Assemblyman Bob Wood named Charles Kramer of Pebble Beach to the California State Republican Central Committee. Kramer will be remembered locally, along with Earl Moser, as an active environmentalist who successfully fought the proposed construction of a Humble Oil plant at Moss Landing a few years ago.

DEAN'S LIST

Several local young people were on the dean's list at California State Polytechnic College in San Luis Obispo. From Carmel were:

SERENE HIGHNESS

Much excitement for Lauretta Barabe, who runs the Hermitage Shop, when a friend of the Immaculate Heart Hermitage in Big Sur - it's their shop and they make the fruit cakes that are sold there - ordered two of the cakes to be sent to her Serene Highness, Princess Grace of Monaco.

Miss Barabe, whose brother is a hermit at Immaculate Heart, told the Pine Cone that the Hermitage has been fortunate in having Bing Crosby, among other well known persons, for a patron.

VAN LOBEN SELS LETTER

W.E. "Bud" van Loben Sels writes from Oakville that he and his wife Jean have purchased the Oakville Vineyards and Winery, as well as the Tasting Room and Gift Shop in that town.

They opened the Tasting Room in November, delayed when both were injured in a head-on automobile collision in October.

SNOW VISIT

It takes youth to do those young, dauntless things - like taking a pre-schooler and a six-month-old baby on a skiing trip! That's what former Carmelites Margie and Mike Dillon did, after a recent visit to their Carmel parents, the Robert R. Martins - Sally and Dick, Margie's folks - and Mike's mother Mrs. Elizabeth Deasy. Then off they went with Heather, who is called Bunny, and Michael, Jr., who is known as Mickey.

WEDDING-TO-BE

Betty Oenning revealed that her former real estate associate, Catherine Parcells who is now living in Berkeley, will be married in about 10 days to Les Morrison. Both have been widowed for several years, the two couples having known each other for some time previously. They will live in Berkeley. Mr. Morrison's home.

BEYOND "BLEEDING"

Although Mrs. Marc Logie was educated in the United States and is married to an American, she still holds a tender spot for the innate courtesy of the people of Japan where Yoshiko was born. She wanted to share with Pine Cone readers an experience that followed her recent visit to Tokyo.

She purchased two lacquer trays in the Takashimaya department store, asked to have them wrapped so she could mail them to her Carmel address. Both trays were shattered on arrival a month later. Lest the store wrap future merchandise the same way, she wrote the store of her disappointment.

Within a week a letter of apology, and soon afterwards four trays in perfect condition - the store wasn't sure of the color she had bought. Service beyond

"bleeding" Yoshiko said the Japanese call it, and added, "I am sure nowhere in the world can you expect service of such calibre."

AT SUNDAY'S OPENING of the "Art for Heart" exhibit at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art: Mrs. Charles Trumbly of Carmel with William F. Stone, Jr., head of the Art Department, Carmel High School. The two are admiring one of several paintings in the show by Philip Thorngate, M.D. of Monterey. The exhibit will be on display at the museum during the month of February, as a salute to the Central Mission Trails Heart Association. The artworks are by physicians, heart patients, volunteers and friends of the local Heart group. Mr. Stone judged and hung the show.

City Council votes to withdraw from county library system

"We're not bluffing. Unless the County comes up with some form of support before July 1, we're going to pull out."

Carmel's Mayor Barney Laiolo thrust his pipe between his teeth in response to a reporter's question after last week's special city council meeting which dealt with the knotty problems swirling around Carmel's Harrison Memorial Library.

The council voted unanimously to withhold service to residents outside of the city limits to lighten the burden on city taxpayers who now pay the entire library budget.

The city fathers also adopted a resolution urging the county board of supervisors to come up with some answer to the perplexing problem.

The suggestion of a special council committee heard earlier was the formation of a special tax district which would levy a tax of some .03c per $100 assessed valuation on property owners in the Carmel area. This would raise an anticipated $30,000 and relieve the pressure on city residents who now pay $19.42 per capita for library service, more than three times the amount paid by residents of any other Peninsula city.

The basis of the problem is that the library is serving more adults outside the city corporate limits than inside. Some 3,700 persons including students who reside outside of the city hold library cards.

Councilman Eben Whittlesley explained that it was not the intention of the council to "sabotage or undermine" the library. "We like our library... we're proud of it, and we want to maintain its quality", he said.

Of the library's total collection of 60,000 books, 28,000 are supplied by the county. These books would be withdrawn July 1 if the supervisors do not create some form of relief.

A stream of speakers expressed their affection for the library, and voiced their disapproval of any cutback in services.

Mayor Laiolo pointed out that if we lose the county books, "We also lose 3,800 readers".

Of the 28,000 county books, 10,000 are in the juvenile collection. The remainder includes one-third of the total reference collection and other items such as all the large-print books.

Also discussed at great length was the possibility of issuing special "fee cards" to library patrons outside the city limits. It was pointed out by several members of the council that this system was costly to administer, and did not work satisfactorily when it was used up to two years ago.

"Fee cards discourage people from using the library. We don't want to do this", said Librarian Vicky Jones. "All we ask is that everyone pay a fair share".

Several of the councilmen took issue with an article which appeared recently in a Monterey newspaper which quoted Supervisor Branson as saying that the supervisors were willing to make substantial increases in the 1971-72 budget to relieve the situation.

"Don't believe everything you read", remarked Mayor Laiolo. "The discussions we have been having with the supervisors have been informal, and we are not ready to accept any such proposal".

The next move is up to the board of supervisors. From the mood of the council, unless positive steps are taken, the library collection and services will be drastically curtailed.

A footnote to the problem was sounded by Mayor Laiolo who stated that a smaller collection might make the city reconsider its plans to build a new library building adjoining Sunset Center. He questioned several members of the library board who were present at the meeting. They conceded that the funds set aside for construction of the new building could be used to purchase books to make up for some of the books that would be lost if the city did pull out of the county system.

(For more information, see the Mayor's Report on Page 32).

Council dismisses Bowman

Following an adjourned regular meeting of the Carmel City Council last Wednesday, Hugh Bayless, Carmel's City Administrator, announced that the City Council had met in a closed personnel session and approved a recommendation of the Carmel Cultural Commission to terminate the employment of Mrs. Dorothy Bowman, program and publicity director for Sunset Center and formerly manager of the Center.

Bayless stated that her position had been

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Editor:

The Monterey County Supervisors on Jan. 12 by a vote of 3-2 enacted Ord. No. 1780 effective Feb. 12, 1971. It rezoned some seven acres near the mouth of Carmel Valley from one residence per acre to six residences per acre. This property is at the corner of Val Verde (a private road) and the Carmel Valley Road between the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center and the Middle School. Many persons and organizations objected at the last public hearing.

I have just learned that the California Election Code Sec. 3752 provides that if a proper petition to rescind such an ordinance is submitted to the Board of Supervisors before the effective date, in this case Feb. 12, the ordinance shall be suspended and reconsidered. This section further requires that the number signing the petition shall be at least 10 votes for all candidates for governor at the last election. This amounts to 5,952 signatures needed.

The next section, No. 3753, provides that if the supervisors do not entirely repeal the ordinance it shall be submitted to the voters at the next regular election or a special election.

The Carmel Citizens Committee at its January annual meeting overwhelmingly voted against any increase in population density in the area.

Application has been or may be made to the Federal Water Quality Administration of the United States Government for financial assistance to the work proposed under this solicitation. The United States Government, in implementation of EXECUTIVE ORDER 11246 (Equal Employment Opportunity), or September 24, 1965, requires its constituent Agencies, which provide financial assistance to construction, to conduct Equal Employment Opportunity Compliance Reviews prior to award.

Accordingly, the apparent low bidder under this solicitation should be prepared to attend a meeting that will be scheduled by the Federal Water Quality Administration after opening of bids, but before award, where he will be requested to specify what affirmative action he has taken or proposed to take to assure equal employment opportunity on the project. Until a determination has been made by the Federal Water Quality Administration that a satisfactory compliance position exists on the part of the prospective contractor, and the determination has been concurred in by the Environmental Protection Agency, Office for Equal Opportunity, award of the contract will not be authorized.

The Board reserves the privilege of rejecting any and all bids or to waive any irregularities or informalities in any bid or in the bidding.

'Every time you put up a new build

BY JUDITH A. EISNER

Olof Dahlstrand, architect and chairman of the Carmel Planning Commission, is a handsome, grey-haired gentleman with a warm and ready smile. Speaking with him and seeing the smile flash again and again, one gets the impression that he is a man who genuinely enjoys his work, his surroundings and his life.

One of the reasons behind the ready smile may be that Dahlstrand discovered early in life that he wanted to be an architect and realized that ambition.

Born in Wausau, Wisconsin, in 1916, he was the son of a mechanical engineer.

"I always drew fairly well as a boy," he says, "and my father encouraged me. I guess he figured architecture was close enough to engineering to satisfy him," he smiles.

By the time Olof was 12 years old, he had committed himself to architecture. The rest was only a matter of time and training.

He left Wisconsin after high school and attended Cornell University for five years.

"It's really a bit unfair," he says. "Architectural students receive a B.A. after five years of study while any other student receives a master's degree."

APPRENTICESHIP

Aspiring architects must also serve the equivalent of a three-year apprenticeship with a licensed architect before taking the state licensing examination. Olof served his apprenticeship in Milwaukee, working for various architects, until he received his license.

Eventually, he opened his own office in Milwaukee and worked in that city for two years.

In 1948, Olof left his home state once again and headed for San Francisco.

Why?

He smiles. "I just had difficulty in communicating my ideas to the people of Wisconsin," he admits. "I was just too modern for their tastes; so I moved to California, where my ideas weren't considered far out by any means."

Happily, he didn't have to take the state licensing exam in California, for this state recognizes Wisconsin's standards, but he did have to write a thesis on the effects of earthquakes on structures. "We didn't have that problem in Wisconsin," he comments.

'FREQUENT VISITS'

During the 11 years he practiced in San Francisco, Olof, his wife and two sons made frequent visits to Carmel and the Monterey Peninsula. They decided to move to Carmel permanently when Olof was commissioned to design the Carmel Plaza shopping complex on Ocean and Mission. In the spring of 1969, he opened his office in Carmel and moved his family down.

Being an architect and a Carmelite can be incompatible, Olof admits. His professional success depends on commissions to build new homes and offices - which, in 1971, are an architectural eternity away from the quaint Carmel cottages of yesteryear.

"Every time you put up a new building, you lose some of the character of Carmel," he says. "You also, of necessity, lose some more of the natural trees and foliage."

Olof Dahlstrand designed the Carmel Plaza and the Wells Fargo Bank on San Carlos in Carmel and is now working on the new Crocker-Citizens Bank which will be built on the site of the old Purity Market on Sixth and Mission. He also designed the Mid-Valley Shopping Center in Carmel Valley.

What does the designer of such modern structures see in the old Carmel structures that make them worth saving?

UNIQUE

His smile flashes: "They have a style, a 'pizazz' all their own. They were built by people who had an understanding of the forest ... each house is unique and individual; they are all different shapes and colors and they have an innocence and simplicity that is charming."

By comparison, he finds many of the newer homes in Carmel "very ordinary", and goes on to admit that "much of what is really fine architecture in Carmel wasn't done by architects at all, but by people who had sensitivity and taste and an awareness of their surroundings."

Why, then, are these older buildings doomed?

"Because," Olof explains, "they are being purchased by people who have lived in bigger, more convenient houses. Most of these older homes were originally weekend or summer houses. They just don't make it as all-year-round dwellings."

"When the new owners discover all the inconveniences, it's often impossible to remodel extensively; so they raze the house and rebuild on the site."

The commercial district of Carmel, as Olof sees it, will change much more slowly than the residential areas. He credits the small independent businesses of Carmel with helping to stabilize the rate of change.

"A KILLING"

"These small businesses lack the need for expansion," he says. The problem is that larger retail operations are looking at Carmel longingly - "to come in and make a killing," he phrases it. "Every new bank or office building speeds the general change," he admits.

Tree-planting, however, he sees as desirable change.

"Dolores is an example of just how dull and dreary a business street can be without trees," he says, commenting on the recent proposal to plant more trees on Dolores south of Ocean. "I'd even like to see the City plant a few more trees in the middle of some streets - and push back some of the blacktop to narrow the streets."

How does he reconcile the differences that come from being a Carmelite, an architect and the chairman of the City Planning Commission?

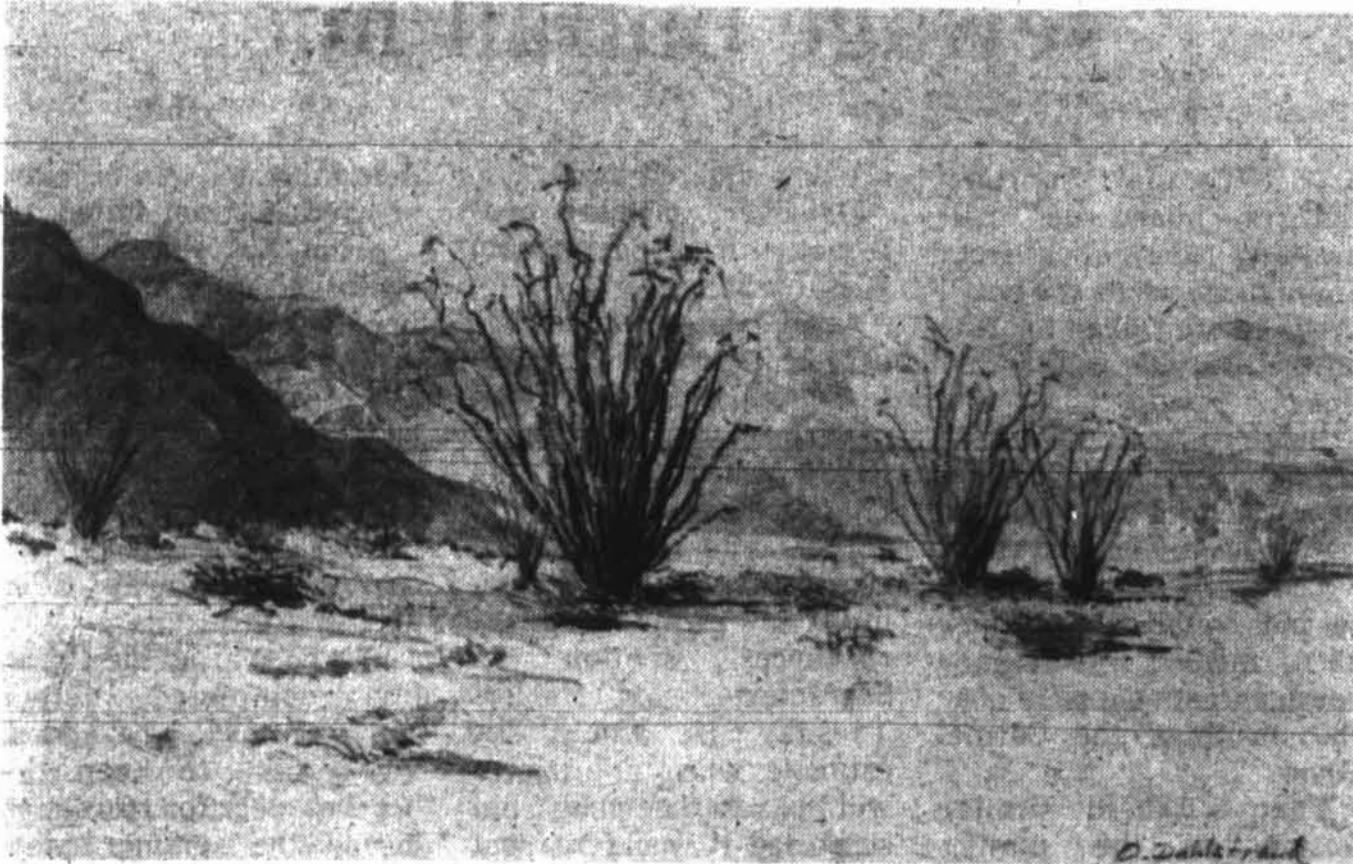

A DAHLSTRAND-DESIGNED home nestles beneath a shapely oak tree in Carmel Valley.

CARMEL PLAZA, on Ocean and Mission, was Olof's first commission in Carmel. He opened his office here to complete the plans and supervise building.

lding, you lose something of Carmel'

A TALENTED ARTIST in his spare time, Dahlstrand combines sketching with trips to California backwoods country. Pictured is a desert landscape.

MANY OF Dahlstrand's "just for fun" sketches are of old California and small towns in the Mother Lode country, such as this airy pencil sketch of Fiddletown.

"I am a citizen of Carmel and really love it dearly," he says simply. "As an architect I do these commissions hoping to do as little harm to and sometimes actually help improve the city. As a member of the Planning Commission, I want to encourage builders to do the best they can - and to do as little harm to the basic character of Carmel as possible."

FUNCTION

He explains the function of the Planning Commission as a kind of architectural watchdog - its job is to guard and protect the city. Part of the Commission's work consists of Design Review of all commercial structures to see that they are in harmony with the Carmel "feeling".

Design Review does not include residential structures, although the Commission is talking of extending it to do so. Olof isn't sure that such extension of control will do much good:

"As much as I deplore the loss of the wonderful old houses, you can't legislate beauty. The city government can't force someone to design a beautiful house. It's something that must come from within."

"I'm not sure there would be a really noticeable improvement in the long run - although we could prevent some really terrible houses ..."

He has a better idea:

"What we might do to preserve what we still have is designate particularly well done buildings as landmarks, to preserve them."

"We might include the library and several Maybeck houses - there'll never be another Maybeck building, you know - and innumerable small, charming cottages, maybe those built or lived in by famous people from Carmel's past."

ENVIRONS

While he is unhappy about the future fate of areas outside of the City, Olof doesn't think careless development of these areas will hurt Carmel.

"It's a shame to see these immediate environs develop in the manner they're going. At the same time, I don't think it will hurt Carmel except that people will be more and more depressed when they leave the city."

"One of the most difficult problems facing our country today is our changing notion of land ownership and development. It's free enterprise - building to make money - versus preservation of the environment. It's the artichoke fields being turned into tract homes."

"Eventually," he continues, "Carmel Valley will be pretty much filled up with houses, and when you bring people into an area, you immediately need services - shopping centers, gas stations, schools."

Olof doesn't like isolating the residential from the commercial districts in an area.

"I feel that small, local stores mixed into residential areas have less harmful impact on an area than strictly residential areas interspersed with huge shopping centers," he says.

"One of the concerns of the Planning Commission," he says, "is to encourage more residential use of the business district ... apartments above stores and offices, for example." He looks at the ceiling, above which the sound of a chair scraping can be heard.

"I feel good leaving the office at night, knowing there's someone living in the apartment upstairs," he says with a smile.

ANNEXATION

He is also in favor of prudent annexation of Carmel's adjacent unincorporated areas.

"These areas, both to the north and south of the city, are primarily residential and many are very nice residential areas at that," he says. "If we annex these parts, it will make the basic city more residential in character. The business district is not going to grow much in years to come, so more residential area will set the character of the city."

Olof also feels that Carmel can make good use of the talented people living in unincorporated areas and would like to see more young families with children in the city, to "add a little zip to things."

In addition to his business and Planning Commission duties, Olof likes to putter at cabinet work and to drive around California.

"I detest tourist trips," he says emphatically. "I like to snoop in the backwash areas of the world." He couples his off-the-beaten-track jaunts with sketching and has done some creditable pencil sketches and watercolors of old California Mother Lode towns and landscapes. Some of these have won honors at the Monterey County Fair, but Olof does them just for the fun of it.

OPTIMISM

One gets the impression that he enjoys most of the things he does, and that his optimism and good nature are as much a resource for the city as his architectural talents.

In spite of the inexorable changes chipping away at Carmel, Olof sees a bright future for the city:

"Carmel is really a unique place and it's going to become more so as the rest of the world becomes more plebian," he says with certainty.

Word expected soon on approval for new sewage outfall line

The Carmel sanitary district board is still awaiting information from Sacramento which the board needs before calling for bids on the district's new outfall line.

However, board chairman Harold C. Arnot said Monday he is "inclined to believe the matter is all squared away."

The board last week called for bids on the district's new $3.1 million secondary sewage treatment plant near the mouth of the Carmel River.

They withheld similar action on the plant's proposed 600-foot outfall line into Carmel Bay.

Sanitary district attorney Shelburn Robison revealed the district lacks 100 feet of right-of-way over state-owned beach.

Arnot told the board he assumed the easement was granted following recent correspondence with State Parks Director William Penn Mott.

"The reason we held up the call for bids on the outfall, we weren't quite sure whether authorization from the Parks Department was complete," Arnot said Monday. "There was some confusion over the wording of Mott's letter."

The source of the confusion is that the easement has been divided into two parts, said Arnot. One applies to the line across the beach and the other to a line connecting the beach line and the outfall line, he said.

The first line will be included in the treatment plant bid and the second in the outfall bid, said Arnot.

"We weren't sure whether Mr. Mott's letter encompassed both easements," he added. "I think things are now squared away."

However, official confirmation from Sacramento is still pending.

Arnot said he outlined the easement problem Thursday to state parks department superintendents in Monterey, Milton Frincke and Charles Mehler.

The matter is now being considered at the department's environmental resources section in Sacramento, said Mehler Tuesday. He would not estimate when an answer will be forthcoming, but suspected it would be sent directly to the sanitary district board rather than the parks department office in Monterey.

Mehler indicated that serious questions concerning the outfall line are still being asked by the parks department. He was not sure a determination was as close at hand as Arnot stated.

Arnot attributed the confusion over the outfall line to "technical details."

"I see no reason they won't be taken care of," he added. "We would like very much to get out requests for bids for the whole project. We've had one kind of delay after another."

"We hope to get the outfall line completed before summer starts," he added. "They like to keep the beaches clear for recreation during the summer months."

Arnot expected plant construction to require 18 months.

"We were hopeful the plant would be finished by the end of this year," he said. "Now we're pushing for the end of next year."

Cunningham to leave All Saints; Sweeney senior parish warden

Prof. DeForest Sweeney, chairman of the Humanities Division at Monterey Peninsula College, has been selected senior warden of All Saints Parish.

Elected to the vestry of the local Episcopal parish at last week's annual meeting for three-year terms were Nelms Finch of the personnel office at Fort Ord; Raymond Smith, Monterey businessman; Thomas White, Carmel accountant; and Sindy Williams, building contractor.

Other members of the twelve-man board which operates the local parish, the day school in Carmel Valley and the Episcopal mission of Santa Lucia in Big Sur are Brian Bennett representing youth; Barbara Kynaston the clerk; Charles Lord the junior warden; Perry Miller representing the scouts; John Monroe the Sunday School; William Lindsey of Carmel representing communications; and Janice Niebel of Monterey representing social action.

Among their first tasks this spring will be to interview candidates to replace the Rev. Arthur Cunningham who leaves March 1 to become rector of St. James Church in Monterey. The entire vestry and staff will hold a weekend retreat next month at the Franciscan Center in San Juan Bautista.

Beautiful Ways to Live

One of the most intriguing aspects of our area isn't always immediately discovered by the casual visitor - the great variety of climate and terrain and setting available to us. Here are beautiful ways of life in four of those very different-from-each-other-areas:

IN THE MAGICAL ENVIRONMENT OF THE DEL MONTE FOREST, overlooking the 5th Tee of the Dunes Course, you push open a wrought iron gate and you're in the peaceful walled entry court of the house pictured at the top of this column.

This is a quiet, peaceful home in which simplicity and understated luxury combine in a beautiful way. In fact, it's difficult to describe this 3-bedroom home in any other way than to call it perfection in its $66,500 price range. May we show you?

CARMEL HIGHLANDS - A PRIVATE WORLD IN THE REDWOODS

Overlooking the sea, a completely secluded contemporary. 34-foot step-down paneled living room extended by a redwood deck; 3 other patios for outdoor pleasure. Find privacy and a quiet feeling of peace in a home that was planned as an easy-care weekender where entertaining would be especially pleasant. 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, and completely furnished right down to the stemware for only $79,500.

CARMEL POINT - A VERY SPECIAL PLACE

In Carmel's most asked for location we have just listed a perfectly delightful little house, ideal for weekending or for travelers who want a gracious but easy-care home base. 2 bedrooms and baths, separate dining room (hard to find in a small home), walled courtyard to capture the sun, and all in white-glove condition. (The beach is a block away.) Price $55,000.

Let us show you all the beautiful ways to live in the Carmel Area.

By BARNEY LAIOLO

IT WAS A PLEASURE to see the many people in attendance at the special meeting in the council chambers regarding the library issue. I was proud of the attitude of the group as a whole and of how each presented his point of view during the meeting. This action by interested people is what I have been stressing for quite some time. If the public will take some time and attend the meetings, this will make for better understanding and much better informed citizenry. Thank you all for attending.

You no doubt have read or heard about the discussion regarding the library. I repeat again that it is not the intent of the City Council to eliminate any services or facilities to library users, but only to ask for a reasonable financial return to lighten the load on the city taxpayers. If you live outside the city limits and wish to continue using the Harrison Memorial Library, now is the time to write your supervisor and express your desire.

Some discussion at the last meeting covered the issuance of cards to non-residents. This is a costly and time consuming project. Furthermore, if we did return to this system, I would assume that the cost per card would be in the area of $10.00. If the Board of Supervisors should pass a tax on library users, the amount would be roughly $3.00 based on a 3c tax. It doesn't seem to make sense to me to even consider the card system.

At this point we are not certain of the outcome of MOBAC system if Carmel withdraws from the county. To date there have been no rulings regarding the issue.

It is my sincere wish that an equitable solution will come soon. Just a reminder - write your supervisor.

In closing I would like to add that I had the pleasure of wishing Amy Bingham, an old time resident of Carmel, a Happy Birthday on her 90th. I hope many more.

Attend the Council and Planning Commission meetings - Keep informed - Keep Carmel the way you want it.

P.S. With regard to the lighting at the auditorium in Sunset Center I personally made an inspection with Dr. Taeuber and the musicians playing with the Symphony and it appears that the new lighting arrangement has greatly improved the problems that were existant on the front stage.

January in Carmel

SUN IS FOR KIDS: Mrs. William Hanzelka of Carmel took advantage of the balmy weather to allow the kids to romp in the sand and surf. The Hanzelka kids are (l-r): Bradley, Suzanne and Eric. Chum John Rudolph came along to watch the tots and get his share of January sunshine.

THE ONLY WAY TO GO: Jay Criddle and Dee Draser, counsellors at Middle School, found the warm weather ideal for cycling along Carmel Valley Rd.

TIME TO READ TOO: Mike Moraz of Carmel found the warm air and sunshine ideal accompaniment for light reading in Devendorf Park.

Carmel's vegetable life was aware first of last week's mock spring. A full two weeks before the thaw, sour clover realized what was coming and pushed forth on tender stalks by the bushful. Luxurious clumps muffled the earth to incubate other seeds. The pale yellow flowers were still rolled and pointed toward the earth.

The sun, when it began to appear, still maintained a southern arc so that half a lot, behind a building, remained in cool shadow. In the other half, the clover blossoms opened and turned toward the light as if they had the faces and purpose of a drawing in a children's book.

"Here comes the sun."

The unexpected dots of yellow against the lush green encouraged further investigation. At the notches in a sapling's bare wires, horny buds poked forth.

Strangely, the obituary page was full that week.

Many people didn't relax to the notion of constant sun for a day or two. Sweaters and coats worn on the way to work—even then unneeded—were jettisoned as the morning grew. One lady, tottering along the sidewalk in a grey overcoat, completely rejected the evidence.

"The sun's out."

"I don't feel it," she replied.

As the realization sank in it became impossible to sit inside. Unusual excuses to leave the office were concocted. Mail runs lengthened. Food establishments served their first patio customers in months. At the Village Corner, customers selected seats facing north. Letter writers perspired sweetly.

"Do you notice the way everyone's smiling and saying hello?"

The first bikini of the year at Carmel beach.

Delicious time-killing in Devendorf Park.

It was a mock spring of course. The sun disappeared over the weekend.

It's a surprise it lasted as long as it did, a bonus, a reminder of one's gaiety.

MUNCHING LUNCHEON: Two Carmel pretties, Patti Guenther (l.) and Ellen Lepal take time out from their duties at United California Bank to enjoy box lunch in the sun on Devendorf Park bench.

PART OF THE SCENE TOO: Visitor used his knapsack for a pillow last week and found a quiet spot to soak up the sun at Carmel Beach. Swarms of Carmelites and visitors joined him to enjoy the quiet, clear surf, sparkling white sands and balmy breezes.

"OH, BOY!" Eric Hanzelka of Carmel finds a child's paradise with all the sand and water he can play with at the mouth of the Carmel River.

LATE AFTERNOON SUNSHINE casts lengthening shadows over Carmelites lolling on the grass in Devendorf Park. While some found pleasure in impromptu picnics, others just loafed, played and sang or simply soaked up the welcome sun.

SPRING CLEANING: Lynn McBride, a Carmel city employee, rinses out the fish pond in Devendorf Park to make ready for the coming season.

The conscience of Carmel

Environment and elections-Part III

By GUNNAR NORBERG

WHEN WE BEGAN this discussion, we talked about a long evening meeting at Carmel High School's Brey Hall, where men of standing in various scientific disciplines donating their time made informed comments on various technical aspects of sewage treatment and conversion. The comments were made to a large and attentive audience. Public interest in the subject of local sewage treatment was focused by projects and plans of the Carmel Sanitary District to expand and improve sewage disposal facilities. All this led to public awareness of the board which governs the Carmel Sanitary District, and curiosity about its status and its authority.

Last week we explained that the Sanitary District board is technically an elected one, but that—because of usual public indifference—its members are not often actually elected by a vote of the people. Elections are legally announced, in odd-numbered years, but if only the incumbents file to run for the posts available, those announced elections are cancelled, simply to save what seem to be unnecessary election expense, and the County Board of Supervisors then declares each incumbent "elected" for another four-year term. (Such an election announcement will be made this coming summer, according to Col. Shelburn Robison (USA Ret.), long-time Sanitary District attorney, and three board positions will be up for "grabs"—those of Harold Arnot, Henry Fonseca, and Willis St. Louis. but if no incoming candidates file for these openings, the incumbents can continue in their posts without a public election.

WHEN THE NEWLY-FORMED Pebble Beach Sanitary District began negotiations with the Carmel Sanitary District—negotiations which eventually led to a shared-costs and shared-services agreement—there were objections made by many Carmel residents to various aspects of those negotiations and to the agreement which resulted. While some made their objections directly to the local Sanitary Board, a good many others took their complaints to the City Hall, or to the Mayor, because they did not know that the Sanitary District had a separate, independent, self-governing board. When told this, they often wondered why.

The Carmel Sanitary District was first organized several years before the City of Carmel was incorporated. The District was initially established in 1908—eight years before the City of Carmel officially came into being. When the Sanitary District was reorganized in 1923 (in accord with the terms of a then new state law), it could instead have been dissolved if the entire area served by the District had then been wholly within the limits of the City of Carmel. But it was not. Two portions of the District were outside Carmel's city limits—Carmel Point and La Loma Terrace—and those portions, as well as many others by now, continue to be beyond city boundaries.

If the Carmel Sanitary District had actually been dissolved back in 1923, all of its rights, duties, and obligations would have been assumed by the City of Carmel, and the Carmel City Council would have become its governing body. (If readers should wish to attend a Sanitary District board meeting, the next one is scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 9th, at 7:30 p.m. at the new board office, located next to the Hatch Cover Steak House at the Carmel Rancho).

BEFORE WE GO INTO the implications of the overlapping of separate layers of local government in the same general area, as in the case of Carmel city government and that of the Carmel Sanitary District, let's get back to a consideration with which we ended last week's column. We had found it wholly laudable that so many of the so greatly learned, had freely given both time and thought to problems of pollution and of management of the physical environment locally, as those problems and that management might be affected by what the governing board of the Carmel Sanitary District planned to do in improving and expanding its sewage treatment and sewage disposal facilities.

We had added, however, that there was probably something else which members generally of what is defined as the intellectual community, could do to help in the often desperately needed effort to advance critical public causes threatened by frequently well-heeled, well-staffed interests endangering those causes.

THAT "SOMETHING EXTRA" in thought and effort from the intellectual community, could be a regularly recurring interest in, and attention to, a wide range of activities in which local government actions can significantly affect not only the environment but the circumstances of other kinds, which condition life in the community.

I am, of course, here speaking generally, and I do not mean to imply that any of the participants in that Brey Hall forum, don't exert themselves in their respective communities on a broad range of public questions, instead of on just the one kind discussed for I do not know in any adequate detail what they have or have not done in the immediate localities where they happen to reside.

I do know, however, that many intellectuals have—over a long period of time—substantially limited their attention to that one. And I know of others, who could probably have been elected to public office and who could have made an important contribution to local government not just on one issue but on many, but who have refused even to become candidates for public office.

Local government—whether it is the single-purpose government of the Carmel Sanitary District kind of the general-purpose type represented by the City Council of Carmel or by the County Board of Supervisors—needs the continuing attention of people not only of good will and good intelligence but also those who, in addition, have had the extra advantage of specialized higher education.

Next week we will try to suggest what might be done to make local government more effective, and the bearing which improved elections could have on that concept.

PARTY PLANS

BY PHYLLIS JERVEY

A new look, a new feeling has taken over Carmel's landmark La Playa Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Howard (Bud) Allen have changed a rather sedate rendezvous into a colorful, amusing place to meet and in which to stay.

Informality and relaxation are today's keynote. Rooms and lanai suites overlook meticulously kept lawns, tempting pool, beautiful flowers in bloom. Nighttime, nearby waves on Carmel Beach roar, with barking seals in the echoing distance.

"Party Plans" investigated the menus, the excellent meals themselves, the perfect and cheerful service. This was easily made possible by Nielsen Locke. When we interviewed each other it was like chatting with one's next door neighbor. In our case it was kitchen gossip...just what your reporter wanted...and received.

Nielsen, with his easy-going and attentive manner, is welcomed here. A bachelor from Columbus, Ohio, he returned to Carmel because he recalled with such pleasure his stay at Monterey Presidio's D.L.I. There he studied-Chinese Mandarin. Perhaps someday Nielsen will teach hotel hospitality in China with our language!

La Playa's chef Issac Israel is from the Philippines. He started in 1930 at Carmel's only (almost beach front) hotel as bellhop, waiter, gardener, and now has his own staff of about ten. Issac does the ordering, makes out the menus, prepares the specialties-himself, supervises with alert expertise.

Any question about his versatility?

On each day's menu there is always Monterey Bay Salmon cooked any way you prefer...the freshest of Carmel Valley vegetables and fruits. Homemade desserts. There is also an amazing variety of California or imported wines. Under each main dish on the menu appropriate wines are suggested. One doesn't need to be a connoisseur for L.P. carafes of wine.

We are giving a few of our favorites which we too frequently enjoy in La Playa's Sunset dining room with its breathtaking view of the Pacific.

These are not exactly how Issac prepares them. What canny chef tells all?

ARROZ CON POLLO (Chicken with Rice)

Two plump chickens
1 cup olive oil
Salt, paprika, oregano
2 cups raw long-grain rice
Saffron

1 cup chopped onions
2 cloves garlic, mashed minced parsley, pimiento
dry white wine
Large green pitted olives

Make a broth with necks, giblets, adding livers at last moment. Cut chickens into serving pieces. Brown lightly in olive oil in large heavy skillet. Transfer to iron kettle or earthen cooking pot. Saute onions and garlic in skillet in which chicken was browned, adding extra olive oil if needed. Pour over chicken. Add 5 cups chicken broth amplified with canned broth or bouillon cubes. Simmer, covered, until chicken is almost tender. Add rice with 1 tsp. saffron powder or dissolved threads of this special Spanish seasoning with salt, paprika, oregano to taste. Cook slowly on top of stove until liquid (which includes dry white wine) is absorbed and rice fluffy. Put into decorative casserole. Top with minced parsley, pimiento strips, olives. Keep hot at table on electrically heated tray. Serves 6-8 normal appetites. Broiled with butter and fresh lime juice, baby bananas complement this Filipino favorite.

Another Issac achievement is Roast Long Island Duckling, Chamberly Sauce. Please pardon "Party Plans" for being unable to acquire the directions for same. Our suggestion is to order this epicure's dream at La Playa. There you may first have cocktails at their best expertly put together by veteran mixologist in Mr. Moon's La Taberna, so gaily decorated by Mrs. Allen.

Salads are so divine in our area. Especially at luncheon La Playa has a wide selection of these sometimes airy, often hearty assortments. Beverage, rolls, butter are included with all salads. Here is the list: Chef's salad Julienne (ham, cheese, corned beef, turkey) with Salinas lettuce. Half Avocado stuffed with turkey or shrimp salad. Same with an Odello artichoke.

Our selection is Cobb Salad: Avocado, tomato and breast of chicken with crumbled crisp bacon, hard cooked sliced egg, light oil and wine vinegar dressing...you may choose roquefort instead. There is a Cobb lettuce back East but its duplicate is known in our area as hearts of butter lettuce.

Nielsen told "Party Plans" that their establishment (where the action now is) has the only surprise on our Peninsula from a cuisine point of view. Known as "La Playa Hotel Cocktail Supper." Your favorite cocktail or glass of wine is served with their compliments...when you choose between Hot Prime Rib, Open Face Chili-burger, Beef French Dip, Hot Turkey, Monterey Bay Filet of Sole, Special Stea...all hot sandwiches.

GRAND PRIZE WINNER: Richard Brinton of Brinton's Carmel Rancho Hardware awards Zenith am-fm radio to 10-year-old Lynn Harrison of Monterey, grand-prize winner in the store's recent "Great Jellybean Contest." Lynn's guess of 5,362 in the giant urn was only eight short of the exact number, 5,370. Merchandise awards went to 15 other winners, out of a total of some 5,000 entries. (photo by George T.C. Smith).

A re-creative role for Sunset Center

The following is the text of a speech prepared by Frank Riley, new manager of Sunset Center, for delivery last Tuesday before a luncheon meeting of the Carmel Lions Club. We reprint it in its entirety because the editors felt it contained some valuable insights into the thoughts of a man who has assumed a position of great importance in the community. Mr. Riley will be writing a regular weekly column for the Pine Cone to start next week.

BY FRANK H. RILEY

TO PROPERLY PRESENT our argument today, I feel we should first establish a frame of reference within which we can better see our problems and better visualize some solutions.

The frame of reference in today's culture is necessarily a frame of crisis. One need only glance at headlines to realize that we are facing four major crises at the same time and each has a bearing on our subject.

First, and most widely publicized and understood, is the population crisis. Do you realize that if you are somewhere near 50 years old there are more than twice as many people in the United States now as there were when you were a child? And the number grows by geometric progression, faster and faster.

Next, we face a leisure crisis. With more people to do the work and with more machines, automation, and computers to relieve people of routine jobs, we have, for the first time in history, a culture in which the time required for work is less than the uncommitted time left over for leisure.

And then we face a crisis in ecology. More people create more waste to destroy our natural environment, while at the same time, the same people demand more open space, more parks, more pure water and air, more opportunities for the recreative activities with which to fill their expanded leisure.

And, fourth, we face a culture crisis. Ideally, a large population with adequate income and plentiful leisure, enjoying proper environmental factors, should find life to be a ball - an experience in growth, development, and expanding the consciousness far beyond the powers of any drug induced trip. A return to the Greek ideal of using leisure for personal growth.

In this situation then, what holds us back? Why isn't life a ball? What are the problems?

THE PROBLEMS

ONE OF THEM, of course, is our good old Puritan Ethic. We have been conditioned for ages to feel that there is something wrong with leisure; that hard work is "good" - is somehow better for the soul. So, one of our problems is to develop in our culture an ethic that places true recreation on a more acceptable social level.

Then we face the problem of added millions of people with added billions of man hours of leisure. If the leisure takes the form of shorter work days, the need for tremendously expanded local facilities - parks, golf courses, museums, concert halls, theatres, and all the rest - becomes obvious. Similarly, if the work pattern takes the form of a two- or three-day week with long weekends, then the need for resort type facilities such as picnic areas, wilderness parks, beaches, hiking trails and the like, grows unmeasurably.

Next, we face the fact that, traditionally, culture has been the private preserve of wealth and society. This presents the problem of how to involve the grass roots - those who are interested whether they have money or not. Support of the arts through private endowment is great but inadequate - wide popular support is greater and must be developed. So, our problem here is to seek out those who are interested, and through wider opportunities and more choices both in quality and in depth, permit them to become personally involved.

This has been a long journey to our own Carmel Community and Cultural Center.

When I first arrived in Carmel, I picked up the New Year's edition of the Pine Cone and discovered that several community leaders had been asked to comment on their vision of the future. Being manager of Sunset, I was naturally gratified to note how many of these people mentioned the Center. Some expressed hope that its influence might grow. Others expressed confidence that Sunset would become a positive influence in the community. But one took a negative view, fearing that what he called "recreation" might creep into the Center and that the culture of the past might become merely "culture for fun," the impression being that the two were incompatible.

Now I have been closely allied to recreation for many years and have been one of the early advocates of including cultural arts in every recreation program. Hence, as you might expect, I reacted to the comment and I felt that my reaction is pertinent to our subject of where the Sunset Center must place itself in this era of crisis about which we have been talking.

We have pointed out that we have to face three problems:

1. Developing a new attitude to the acceptability of leisure.
2. Developing better facilities for the pursuit of leisure.
3. Developing a public support and interest in a culture that is living and vital as opposed to a synthetic culture based on wealth and society.

RE-CREATION CONCEPT

It should be pretty obvious that to do these three things, we must somehow get people to take a new look at life - at goals - at objectives, to get them to discard some old concepts, to discover and accept some new ones. And the best word I can think of for such a process is re-creation. "In the beginning, God created the heaven and the earth, and the earth was without form and void." It was from this formless void that creation then proceeded.

Similarly in our crisis culture, I am sure that we have all felt that our present world, our own lives, and the lives of many of our associates, are equally without form and void. To gain form and purpose calls for re-creation.

Man must take into his hands the unsatisfactory life he faces, the life with leisure that can be made to live and grow, and reward him, and give that life shape and form and purpose. He must broaden its scope; he must aspire to higher levels of peace and humanity and kindness; higher levels of aesthetic achievement and enjoyment; higher levels of personal satisfaction and integrity.

He must learn to make time live not how to kill time.

He must learn how to make time serve him, not just how to serve time.

PERSONAL INVOLVEMENT

THE PATH TO THESE GOALS is through what I might call re-creative culture - culture in which a person can become involved. We all know that the arts form only one part of our culture, for actually everything we do and believe must be included in the over-all culture. But we also know that our habit has been to try to segregate the arts from life - to reserve them for the knowing few.

Now is the time to break down the old shibboleths and recognize that the arts are for you and for me; and that through our involvement and participation, our lives can be expanded beyond our dreams. If you can discover a new concept, if you can experience a new vision, if you can create a picture or a song or a dance or shape a piece of wood or metal into something more beautiful or useful than it was before, then they begin to "blow your mind."

It is great to "do your thing", but never do you discover what your "thing" really is until you have let yourself go, until you have experienced enthusiasm, excitement, and finally satisfaction in some entirely new medium.

So, at Sunset we will suggest not only that you view with appropriate awe the works of Picasso, Rembrandt, and Van Gogh but that you personally take chalk or charcoal or brush or clay and give it a whirl on your own.

We will give you a chance to hear Bach but will not disdain Offenbach.

We will encourage you to try an instrument of your own, or if that is asking too much, to hum or whistle or sing.

We will present Martha Graham but will also have the opportunity for you to learn a few folk dances and squares.

Most great and famous artists are regarded as "gifted" or geniuses. What we forget is that they all have shared in the joy and satisfaction of creativity - that they have in their art re-created the life-powers that made the work possible in the first place.

It is this joy and this satisfaction which we can all discover, even if the genius quality escapes us.

DESIRE AND WILL

Now, I want to be the first to say that Sunset Center can never do all this for anyone. To experience such a life growth - such mind expansion - the individual must have the desire and the will to pursue it. But I hasten to add that lack of facility and even more, lack of opportunity, for becoming involved has often been a deterrent.

So what Sunset can do is to provide the facilities, opportunities, and, hopefully, some incentive and motivation. To do this, it must become aware of the present needs and tastes of all persons in the community.

Especially must it be aware of the interest areas that are being overlooked so that those who possibly have been neglected in the past may be better served in the future.

Further, although the needs of the immediate community should have priority, we must not lose sight of the fact that in looking at the leisure patterns of Carmel, we will find not only a local population with short-term leisure requirements, which must be met at home, but also a tremendous transient population which comes to the area for the specific purpose of finding resort-type leisure activities. Hopefully, Sunset can do its share in meeting this requirement as well.

So, for our part, we are going to try to hold up some ideals, to advocate some ideas, to present some thought provoking programs with enough controversial overtones to demand a bit of thinking, to open some new doors, providing opportunities also for sociability and some joyous experiences and community living.

But we will always keep reminding you that the principle ingredient in our activities must come not from us but from you - and that ingredient is your participation in and your support for those things that will help you to enjoy a more creative and satisfying life.

'Man of La Mancha' to open February 19

The record-breaking Community Theatre run of the American comedy classic "Life with Father" will come to an end this Friday and Saturday, in its twelfth week at the Circle Theatre, Casanova between 8th and 9th, Carmel, to make way for the area premiere of the musical drama "Man of La Mancha", due to open Feb. 19.

Featuring Bill Scholefield as Father Day and Jean McBride as Vinnie Day, "Life with Father" has broken all records in the Community Theatre's ten year history, surpassing those formerly held by "Any Wednesday". The "Life with Father" company also recently toured the production to Saratoga, where it played at the famous Carriage House Theatre at Villa Montalvo.

Reservations are still being taken for the final two performances of "Life with Father" and are now open for the forthcoming "Man of La Mancha" at the Circle Theatre box-office, 624-2669.

WOLVES

Vic and Araby Colton of Carmel Valley will present a program entitled "Have You Seen Any Wolves Lately?" Feb. 11, 8 p.m., at the general meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society at Canterbury Woods Auditorium in Pacific Grove.

The Audubon wildlife film Feb. 12 at 8 p.m. at Pacific Grove Junior High School auditorium will feature "Scandinavian Saga" by John Douglas Bulger.

Jay Roubesh heads cast in 'The Tunnel of Love'

The cast of "The Tunnel of Love," opening Friday at the Studio Theatre-Restaurant, is headed by Jay Roubesh in the Tom Ewell role of Augie Poole whose marriage is threatened by the odd circumstance of adopting a baby that looks too much like him. A teacher at All Saints Episcopal Day School, Roubesh has been active in school and community theatre.

His wife is played by Edie Donahoe who was last seen in "Private Lives" following appearances in "The Seven Year Itch" and "Black Comedy". This was the Doris Day role in the movie version of "The Tunnel of Love" that followed its 417 Broadway performances.

The next door neighbors, Alice and Dick Pepper, are portrayed by Ginie Baker, recently the Wicked Stepmother in "Cinderella" at the Postgraduate School, and David Bradshaw who at one time was with the Pentacle Barn Theatre-In-The-Round in Oregon.

Estelle Novick, the toothsome social worker whose brief escapade with Augie starts all the trouble is in the hands of Kit Hope whose local stage debut was in "You Know I Can't Hear You When The Water's Running for the Tin Barn." The cast is completed by Betty Hughes, the acidulous Nancy of "The Women", who now plays Mis McCracken in charge of the adoption agency responsible for the comic fiasco.

Derived from the novel by Peter De Vries, "The Tunnel of Love" will play at the Studio under the direction of Bill Asp each Friday, Saturday and Sunday night during February and most of March.

Losers at home, Padres seek winning road touch

After dropping three of their last four home games, the Carmel High School varsity basketball team seeks better fortune with three successive games on the road.

The Padres played San Lorenzo Valley Tuesday and meet King City today and Gonzales next Friday.

Carmel beat Pacific Grove 60-57 and lost to Palma 65-51 to bring their Mission Trails League record to four wins and four losses. The Padres' season record is seven wins and eight losses.

Carmel's victory Friday was their third this season over a strong Pacific Grove team.

"We have P.G. on the inside of our cuff," said Carmel Coach Dick Charles. "Our kids really get up for P.G."

Charles pointed out that Pacific Grove possibly would have a 6-2 win-loss league record if the Breakers hadn't played the Padres.

John Neale scored on a jump shot with 1:45 minutes remaining in the game to tie the score at 55-55.

Carmel gained the decisive lead on free throws by John Engstrom and Kevin Cunningham and on a basket on a ball stolen by Jim Conlan.

Neale scored 16 points and Jamie Thorne 21 with 17 rebounds. Thorne maintains a 20 point game average, the third best individual scoring effort in the league.

Kevin Cunningham, with eight points, "really played well," said Charles. "He handled the press well."

Four of Cunningham's points were scored in the last minute.

Against Palma, which leads the league with a 9-0 win-loss record, Neale scored 16 points, Cunningham 8 and Thorne 12.

BEHAVIOR

Behavior of both juvenile and adult law offenders best can be changed by use of the basic rules of learning—reward for good and punish the bad, probation and correctional officers were told Thursday in Monterey.

The suggestion came from Dr. Gene England who spoke to more than 30 members of the tri-county Monterey Bay Area chapter of the California Probation, Parole and Correctional Association on "Behavior Modification."

Charles called the game "a lot closer" than the final score, 65-51, indicates.

Carmel led 32-28 at half-time as the Padres neutralized Palma's leading scorer, Dave Nunes. He scored only five of his 20 points in the first half.

Carmel trailed by three points at the end of the third quarter.

Palma broke the game open on their ability to score from outside, said Charles.

Neale, Carmel's second highest scorer, is out of action currently with a strep throat.

Carmel beat San Lorenzo Valley 77-62 earlier in the season, lost to King City 59-57 and lost to Gonzales 56-51.

VISION CARE

BY DR. R.E. MARLIN
(consulting optometrist)

It's often asked, "What is the difference between an Optometrist, Ophthalmologist and Optician?"

This is best answered by quoting from the U.S. Government Dept. of Labor's 1970-71 Occupational Outlook Handbook, Bulletin 1650-10.

Optometrists help people improve and protect their vision. They examine eyes, make tests to determine defects in vision, and, when needed, prescribe eyeglasses, contact lenses, corrective eye exercises, or other treatment that does not require drugs or surgery. Most optometrists supply the eyeglasses prescribed, and sometimes do minor repair work such as straightening eyeglass frames. Some optometrists specialize in work such as treating visual problems of children, fitting partially sighted persons with microscopic and telescopic lenses, or other high-magnification aids; and analyzing lighting conditions that effect the efficiency of workers. A few are engaged in teaching, research, or a combination of the two.

Ophthalmologists are physicians who specialize in eye diseases and injuries, perform eye surgery, and prescribe drugs or other treatment, as well as lenses.

Dispensing Opticians fit and adjust eyeglasses according to prescriptions written by ophthalmologists or optometrists; they do not examine eyes or prescribe treatment.

MGB-GT

Not as extravagant as it looks.

Mag-style wheels. Sleek fastback design. Detailings that look like hand-craftsmanship. No wonder everybody thinks the MGB/GT is an extravagant car.

But it isn't. License fees are generally lower. And the MGB/GT's resale figure is usually higher because there's no styling or mechanical obsolescence built in. Even gas mileage of 25 miles per gallon is not unusual.

Beyond practicality, though, comes performance. And here, too, the MGB/GT excels. With a 1798 c.c. twin-carb engine, rack-and-pinion steering, racing-type suspension, and front disc brakes.

For comfort's sake, you get orthopedically contoured reclining bucket seats, extra padding on the doors, and pile carpeting, plus lots more luxury features.

So don't judge the MGB/GT by its looks. Not if you're looking for a practical car. Because the MGB/GT proves a car can be practical and look extravagant. Drop into the showroom and see for yourself.

New law allows businessmen to bar undesirables from premises

Carmel businessmen may remove persons they deem undesirable from their premises as a result of an ordinance approved at last week's city council meeting.

The ordinance is aimed at youth who loiter in city courts and plazas such as Fenton Plaza and the Golden Bough courtyard.

The council also unanimously passed ordinances that adjust holidays and regulate vehicle parking in the city.

The trespass ordinance states:

"It shall be unlawful for any person to remain in or upon any business premises, after being notified by the owner, lessee or other person in charge thereof to remove therefrom."

"Further, it shall be unlawful for any person, without permission, express or implied, of the owner, lessee or other person in charge of business premises, to enter upon such business premises after having been notified by said owner, lessee or other person in charge thereof to keep off or keep away therefrom."

The ordinance concludes with five exceptions to the businessman's option. The exceptions deal with civil rights guarantees.

According to Councilman Eben Whittlesey, the ordinance grew out of problems on private property outside of stores. He used Fenton Plaza as an example.

In one case a group of people, referred to as "hippies," "were in the habit of thronging on private property," said Whittlesey. They "thronged" to the extent "they interfered very seriously with normal commercial activities," the councilman said.

"It was difficult to use the shops," he added. "Some were actually sleeping on the premises."

A court case "established that without an appropriate ordinance, a businessman can't combat the problem," said Whittlesey.

City Administrator Hugh

Bayless also stated that transients have been found sleeping at night on the deck of I. Magnin's.

Bayless, who drew up the ordinance, said it stems from complaints by several businessmen over the past few years.

"It's something people have been asking about for some time," said Bayless.

Inspiration for the ordinance came after the city of San Rafael passed a similar ordinance and had it upheld in appellate court, said Bayless. The San Rafael ordinance was directed at a motorcycle gang who "hung out" in a San Rafael parking lot, the administrator said.

EXCEPTIONS

The ordinance does not apply in the following instances:

a. Where its application results in or is coupled with an act prohibited by the Unruh Civil Rights Act or any other provision of law relating to prohibited discrimination against any person on account of color, race, religion, creed, ancestry or national origin.

b. Where its application results in or is coupled with an act prohibited by Section 365 of the California Penal Code or any other provision of law relating to duties of inn-keepers and common carriers.

c. Where its application would result in an interference with or inhibition of peaceful labor picketing or other lawful labor activities.

d. Where its application would result in an interference with or inhibition of any other exercise of a constitutionally protected right of freedom of speech such as (but not limited to) peaceful expressions of political or religious opinions, not involving offensive personal conduct.

e. Where the person who is upon another's private property or business premises is there under claim or color of legal right.

HOLIDAYS

The four-day holiday weekend starting tomorrow in honor of Lincoln and Washington's birthdays is the first to be affected by a new ordinance making Carmel's holidays uniform with other cities on the Peninsula.

The ordinance reads:

"Holidays shall be those fixed by the Government Code of the State of California, except that:

"a. Statewide election days shall not be holidays.

"b. Columbus Day, the second Monday in October, shall not be a holiday.

"c. The Friday following Thanksgiving and the last working day preceding Christmas shall be holidays.

"In the event a holiday falls on a Saturday, municipal departments shall remain open on the preceding Friday, but employees shall be given either the preceding Friday or the following Monday off as in-lieu holidays, at the discretion of the Department Head."

As a result of the ordinance, the forthcoming holiday will be a four-day weekend instead of the previous successive three-day weekends.

The ordinance has two purposes: to bring Carmel's holidays into line with the State holiday schedule and with the Peninsula schedule.

"We don't like to be the only office closed or opened on a particular day," said City Administrator Hugh Bayless.

There is no gain or loss in the number of holidays received by city employees, said Bayless.

PARKING

In another ordinance, the council amended the Municipal Code to make it unlawful:

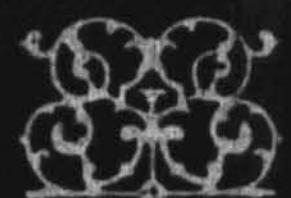

"To park any vehicle in any park or parkway within the City except within parking areas specifically designated as such by the City Council."

Kids make breakfast, learn about nutrition

"Will 10 pounds of bacon be enough?"

This was one of the questions asked in Elaine Green's first grade class at River School recently as students planned their own breakfast at school.

The children studied nutrition, planned a menu, bought the food, set the table and cooked and served a beautiful breakfast (with a little help from their mothers).

CARMEL CLOSEUP: Andrew Kozak

'Each animal has an individual personality...it's like doing

By JUDITH A. EISNER

Andrew Kozak, the Carmel artist who is building a growing reputation as the creator of beautifully detailed pencil drawings of animals, is a handsome, soft spoken, somewhat reticent man. His wife calls him "something of a loner."

He is a man who is justifiably proud of his accomplishments, yet is reluctant to sound boastful in speaking of them. At the same time, he makes it clear that he has worked hard and faithfully at his art; his growth and development and success as an artist are of paramount importance to him.

Andrew was born and raised in Uniontown, Pa. The country atmosphere of his birthplace was a mixed blessing for a boy who showed early promise as an artist. On the plus side, he grew up in intimate contact with nature, especially with domestic and wild animals. The shortcomings of his home town began to show up when he entered high school and, eager for art courses, galleries and museums, found there were none at hand.

Andrew grew up as "the boy who could always draw."

ENCOURAGEMENT

It was Andrew's sixth grade teacher who gave him the encouragement to pursue art as a career. "She was the only person outside my own family to encourage me," he says. "She was the first person to tell me that artists could become famous and successful."

During his freshman year in high school, he bought his first set of oil paints, as well as books on art instruction. He painted at home, on his own, and was aware of a growing disappointment that his school offered no courses to help him.

His first formal recognition came at the end of his senior year of high school.

He had seen the announcement for an annual poster contest sponsored by the Latham Humane Foundation of Palo Alto, commemorating "Be Kind to Animals Week."

He submitted several posters and won first prize in his category.

Uniontown, however, was starving him artistically. Andrew had a sister who lived in Cleveland whom he visited frequently. In Cleveland, he went to a museum for the first time. It was a mind-blowing experience for the young boy.

"My first visit to the Cleveland Museum of Art was awe-inspiring. I can't tell how tremendously stimulating it was for me to see great works of art for the first time!" Even now, years later, his face recaptures some of that boyish wonder as he retells his experience.

TO CLEVELAND

Cleveland being an art Mecca to him, he moved there after high school.

In short order, he landed a job with Halle Brothers department stores and enrolled at the Cleveland Art Institute. World War II interrupted, and in 1943 he joined the Navy.

The first thing the Navy did for him was bring him to California, where he was stationed at Alameda.

"I left home in November," he recalls. "There was the usual rain and snow and cold. I'll never forget how I felt when we detrained at Oakland, in that golden California sunshine. I made myself a promise then that I'd return and make California my home someday."

In the meanwhile, he spent all his spare time studying and attending art classes whenever possible and sketching wherever the Navy sent him.

"I carried art books, sketch pads and watercolors with me," he says. "For a while, I did a great many portraits, working in oils. I started by painting a shipmate; then other mates asked me to paint them."

"I think I improved greatly during those years," he says. "Continuous drawing and sketching are part of an artist's growth."

In 1946 he was discharged from the Navy; in 1947 he realized his dream of coming to California. He moved to Los Angeles and enrolled in the Art Center School, first as a full-time student, then on a part-time basis when he finally had to take a job.

HAD TO WORK

Like many aspiring artists, Andrew had to work in order to eat and study. He became involved in commercial art—an involvement that has lasted up to the present—as a means to an end. "It's a way to make a living," he says somewhat grimly.

Through the years, he has accumulated impressive credentials in commercial art. During a 10-year period as a free-lance artist in advertising and industrial design he counted as clients some of the largest corporations in America. He is currently senior graphics artist for Litton Scientific Support Laboratory at Fort Ord.

But commercial art has been a "necessary evil" for him, and always he has spent as much time as he can find to pursue his "real" art.

Andrew says, "I only went to Los Angeles to study. I had always planned to return to the Bay Area someday, with Carmel as my ultimate goal. I first came to Carmel in 1946 and, like so many other artists, fell in love at first sight."

He moved to San Francisco in 1950 and left in Los Angeles memories of growing acceptance, exhibitions "here and there," and a one-man show.

A milestone of San Francisco living was meeting his wife, Eloise, who lived in the apartment next door. They met at a Christmas party at Andrew's apartment and were married in 1964. Three years later they took the plunge and moved to Carmel.

Ensnared at last in a charming Carmel house, complete with a studio, a sunny patio and a growing art collection, Andrew is still striving toward the goal of being able to paint full-time.

He feels his animal drawings may make it possible.

CHRISTMAS IDEA

To Eloise goes the credit for suggesting he draw animals as special Christmas gifts for close friends. This was two years ago.

The framed drawings created quite a favorable stir and Andrew kept drawing—raccoons, lions, eagles, deer—and more people wanted to have them in their homes.

Eloise, who has an extensive background in art, placed the drawings in the Carmel Valley Art Gallery and the Pebble Beach Art Gallery where they found a ready market.

Andrew has explanations for the popularity of his drawings.

"For one thing, there is an increasing awareness of our ng a portrait of a child'

endangered wildlife," he says. "People have always loved animals, but at last they're no longer taking their existence for granted."

"I try to capture the feeling of the animal itself—the essence of it in its natural pose, its particular characteristics. The drawings also express my own feelings about the animal."

"They are successful as art because each animal has an individual personality. It's very much like doing a portrait of a child," he says honestly.

Andrew draws as much as time allows.

TAKES DISCIPLINE

"It takes great discipline to come home from a full-time job and get into the studio again," he admits. He works every evening and weekends and says, "Eloise has to drag me out of the house just to get me to the beach to watch sea otters or whales."

Andrew does find the time to be the "Saint Francis of the yard," according to Eloise. They feed the neighborhood cats and squirrels and a pair of saucy blue jays who come into their living room to eat peanuts.

He also appreciates belonging to the artistic community of Carmel, going to galleries and meeting and talking to other artists. Eloise, who is co-chairman of the Beacon House Art Auction this year, is very much involved in the Carmel art scene.

Both Kozaks feel that Carmel has its share of good art, but admit that there is an over-abundance of poor art around.

"I ignore the bad and seek out the good," says Andrew, who with Eloise, is slowly forming a collection of paintings by local artists in their home.

Of his growing success, he says: "More than the monetary success, I've been pleased that truly great artists and art critics have bought my work and made the most favorable comments about it."

His only concern for the future is ultimately being able to do nothing but paint; a talented watercolorist, he would also like to do larger animal portraits in acrylics, embodying the same refinement and technique that mark his pencil drawings. He would also like to do landscapes again.

Meanwhile, there is work and more work.

"A fine artist," he says, "creates his own eulogy as he lives."

High court to rule in six months on Carmel's anti-grass sitting law

The U.S. Supreme Court will take up to six months to decide whether it should hear an appeal by the Carmel City Council concerning its now famous ordinance outlawing sitting on city grass.

City Attorney William B. Burleigh said he would send the city's presentation to the court within 30 to 40 days.

If the appeal is accepted, Burleigh will argue the case before the court. It would be his first appearance before the U.S. Supreme Court.

The City Council decided to approach the high court after the State Supreme Court struck down the controversial ordinance two weeks ago.

Burleigh was highly critical of the four justices who voted against the ordinance.

"What they're saying is, if a class or minority is committing a wrong, you can't legislate against that class," he said.

The state court, in a 4-3 decision, ruled the ordinance was unconstitutional in violation of the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

The city council, in passing the ordinance in 1968, stated:

"The City Council of Carmel-by-the-Sea has observed an extraordinary influx of undesirables and unsanitary visitors to the City, sometimes known as 'hippies,' and finds that unless proper regulations are adopted immediately the use and enjoyment of public property will be jeopardized if not entirely eliminated..."

In a decision written by Justice Stanley Mosk, the Supreme Court said: "The Carmel City Council made no effort to define the term hippie, so as to limit the application of its hostile rhetoric to persons who are engaged in illegal conduct. Rather, the council made pejorative reference to the entire class of youthful Carmel visitors whose mode of dress and life style differ from and irritate the majority of the residents and tourists in the city."

Burleigh said the city is going to the U.S. Supreme Court in preference to writing another ordinance which deletes reference to "hippies."

If the ordinance was again challenged, and went before the state court, the justices would be apt to think the city's engaged in word trickery, Burleigh suggested.

The ordinance in full regulates conduct on public property. Its most controversial point has been a prohibition against sitting on lawns. In practice, this has meant people can't sit on the lawn at Devendorf Park—gathering point for what the city council called a "hippie" influx.

The pertinent section reads:

"On any public property it shall be unlawful for any person to:

"Climb any tree; or walk, stand or sit upon monuments, vases, fountains, railings, fences, planted areas, or upon any other property not designed or customarily used for such purposes, or to sit on any sidewalks or steps, or to lie or sit on any lawns."

CITY GETS $$ FOR ROAD PROJECT

Supervisor Willard Branson announced last week that the City of Carmel has been granted $15,807.00 in "Aid to Cities" funds to help finance the recent improvement at the intersection of Ocean Ave. and Carpenter St. This project consisted of widening, reconstruction, and paving.

The contractor for the project was Granite Construction Co. The "Aid to Cities" funds assist the City of Carmel in improving its "Select Streets" which connect to other streets and roads forming a network of Select roads throughout Monterey County.
